Westmoreland Predicts Step-Up in the War

SAIGON — Gen. William C. Westmoreland said yesterday a renewal of enemy activity can be expected soon, though the Communists "seem to have temporarily run out of steam."

The commander of U.S. forces in Vietnam expressed belief in an interview the next major campaign will develop in the 1st Corps area just below the demilitarized zone, where increased signs of enemy movement have been detected lately.

U.S. bombers and Marine battalions form the major allied shield there against a mass invasion from the north by the 35,000 or so Red regulars Hanoi is estimated to have standing by.

The ground war was in one of its periodic lulls after heavy fighting over two weeks which, while levying a relatively high toll on allied units and materiel, was reported to have cost the Viet Cong and North Vietnamese more than 5,000 dead.

"The enemy is callous to casualties," Westmoreland said. "He makes reports out of Hanoi that he is winning great victories."

Britons Faced With Increased Taxation

LONDON — Chancellor of the Exchequer Roy Jenkins told Britons yesterday runaway wages and profits would be taxed away by the government lest they imperil the benefits of Britain's devaluation of the pound.

"The faster money incomes increase, the harsher must be the tax increases," Jenkins told the House of Commons at the start of a two-day debate on the government's economy package ushering a shift in Britain's world role and its welfare state.

The threat of tax increases followed the swing of the economy ax by Prime Minister Harold Wilson. Jenkins said the two must go together to keep the economy in balance so it can concentrate on exports. He predicted harsh taxes in any event, no matter how "unpopular and unpleasant."

His sobering speech restored calm to London's financial district. The financial community, now deeply suspicious of the Labor government, had thought the spending cuts announced by Wilson would be all—and that they would not be enough.

Church Council Urges Crackdown

WASHINGTON — The National Council of Churches urged the Supreme Court Wednesday to bar large housing developers from refusing to sell homes to Negroes.

In a friend-of-court brief filed in support of an interracial St. Louis couple, the council of Protestant churches declared: "Jim Crowism is alien to American municipalities whether operated directly by the state or operated privately with the assistance of the state."

A group of 24 Roman Catholic bishops, two of them cardinals, announced in Chicago they will file a similar brief with the high court Thursday contending that open housing is the law of the land under an 1866 civil rights law implementing the abolition of slavery.

The Chicago-based National Catholic Council for Interracial Justice joined with the two cardinals and the bishops, who come from most sections of the country, in signing the brief.

The brief was prepared by William Ball, an attorney of Harrisburg, Pa. in consultation with moral theologians. It then was joined by the 24 bishops.

Warming Trend Expected to Relieve Country

The weather experts called it a freak arctic blast and said it probably wouldn't happen again in the next 15 or 20 years.

But that was small consolation to shivering Southerners who watched the temperatures plunge to subfreezing all the way to the Gulf of Mexico.

Freak or not, it was just plain cold. In fact, the 12 degrees recorded at Asheville, N.C., Wednesday was one degree lower than Bismarck, N.D.

A warming trend is expected to give slight hope for relief from the frigid mass which brought lows of 24 to Tallahassee, Fla., and 32 to Apalachicola, Fla., on the Gulf. It is unusual for the temperature to fall below freezing along the Gulf Coast, but this region, like the rest of the continental United States, fell victim to the bitter cold wave.

There have been at least nine deaths in the Deep South attributed to the weather, including five in Tennessee and a mother and three children who were asphyxiated in an apartment in Atlanta.

Republican Governors Must Shape Platform

HARRISBURG — Gov. Shafer said emphatically yesterday that Republican governors should have a leading voice in the preparation of a national GOP presidential platform.

"Republicans occupy the governor's chair in 28 states which represent over 60 per cent of the nation's population," Shafer said at a Harrisburg news conference. "Their voices should be heard in adopting a platform at the national Republican convention."

The Republican Governor's Conference last December in Palm Beach, Fla., endorsed Shafer as co-chairman of the Platform Committee with Sen. Everett M. Dirksen of Illinois. U.S. Sen. Hugh Scott, R-Pa., added his endorsement of the Pennsylvania chief executive Tuesday in Washington.

"I'm delighted, of course, with the support I have received," Shafer commented. "I would be honored to serve in that capacity."

"But whether it is I or another Republican governor is immaterial."

Council Advocates Warning on Liquor Bottles

HARRISBURG — Liquor containers should bear health warnings similar to the statements on cigarette packs, a spokesman for the Pennsylvania Council on Alcohol Problems said yesterday.

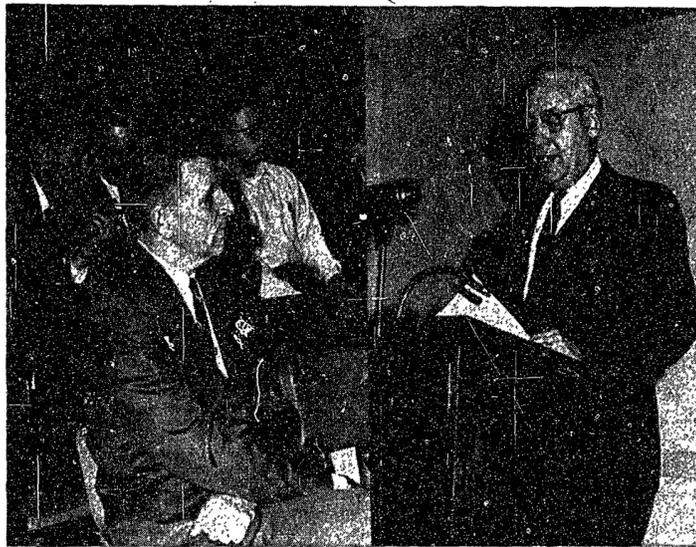

"We think the time has come when a printed statement should appear on all containers stating that the contents of this package could or may be injurious to oneself and could become habit forming," the Rev. Rayford G. Feather told the Governor's Liquor Code Advisory Committee.

A committee member, Rep. Matthew J. Ryan, replied that perhaps it would be more practical for the Federal rather than the state government to pass such a law.

The committee, set up in May by Gov. Shafer to review the state's liquor code from top to bottom, held one of its final hearings. It will send recommendations to the governor.

Discusses Infant Mortality, Suggests Insurance Study

Ferguson Speaks on Local Government Reforms

JOHN H. FERGUSON (right), PROFESSOR EMERITUS OF POLITICAL SCIENCE and public administration, and research director for Pennsylvania's Constitutional Convention, spoke about local government reforms last night in the assembly room of the Nittany Lion Inn. Addressing a small group of students and faculty, he mentioned the problems and prospects of the four major areas being dealt with in the limited constitutional convention: tax and finance, judicial, apportionment, and local governments. The convention adjourns Feb. 29. Proposals will be on the ballot in the April primary.

WASHINGTON (AP)—President Johnson told the nation Wednesday night it can expect higher taxes, continued progress, the most massive $186 billion spending program in all history, and continued explorations for peace.

There was a call for legislation to "free our gold reserves" without backing off from commitments to maintain the price of gold at $35 an ounce.

Johnson also urged in his State of the Union message legislation aimed at private employment of 500,000 hard core unemployed in three years.

The President delivered his message in person to a joint Senate-House session, broadcast nationally by television and radio.

He asked for the launching of a 10-year campaign to build six million housing units for low and middle income families.

Infant Mortality He urged steps to improve what he called the shocking infant mortality rate in America.

In addition to prodding Congress to pass consumer legislation still left over from the last session, the chief executive suggested a major study of automobile insurance, "new safeguards to insure the quality of fish and poultry, and the safety of our community water supplies."

These and other proposals will be covered in a budget for the 1969 fiscal year which starts July 1, that will be up $10.4 billion in spending over the current year.

There was no backing away from the President's bid for a 10 per cent surtax on incomes of individuals and corporations.

The budget figures are based for the first time on a new unified concept which includes $47 billion in spending from vast trust funds. These are for such things as Social Security, highways and medicare.

Predicts Steady Growth Johnson said the economic outlook for this year, if the country is vigilant, is one for steady growth.

Both at home and abroad, Johnson said, the nation is challenged. But he said it is the national will and not its strength that is being tried, its sense of purpose and not its ability to achieve a better America.

He said that we have the strength to meet every challenge and he believes with an abiding conviction that the American people "have the will to meet the trials these times impose."

Among the trials, of course, is the war in Vietnam. And Johnson said there are marks of progress.

Declaring that aggression never will prevail and that American patience and perseverance will match U.S. power, Johnson said the nation is challenged. But he said it is the national will and not its strength that is being tried, its sense of purpose and not its ability to achieve a better America.

State To Investigate LSD Blindness Incident

HARRISBURG (AP) — Gov. Raymond P. Shafer ordered a full-scale investigation yesterday into the 18-month-old case of six Pennsylvania college students blinded by the sun while in a trance induced by LSD.

Shafer declined to name the students or the school they attended, however, and said officials connected with his administration had been ordered to remain silent also.

The only positive statement the governor made at a news conference was that the school was not Edinboro State College, near Erie, as had been pinpointed in one published report.

Shafer was critical of the way the tragedy had been handled since it first came to the attention of certain state officials in June 1966.

"The fact that someone was blinded by the use of LSD should have been brought to the attention of the American public," he said. "I agree, it should have been done 18 months ago."

The governor said he would "make fully public all of the details of the case which are in the public interest."

"Terrible Tragedy" Shafer, who returned Tuesday night from a two-week Virgin Islands vacation, said: "Preliminary facts given to me on my return convinced me that a terrible tragedy had occurred in the lives of six young Pennsylvanians because of the use of LSD."

"It is a tragedy that shocks each one of us and demands that we do everything within our power to end the illegal use of drugs."

"The first consideration in this present matter must be the well-being and rehabilitation of the six students. They already suffer physical scars which they are trying to learn to live with. We must do everything possible to help them."

Shafer said he has ordered Thomas W. Geary, Secretary of the State, to turn the files of each of the six students over to Atty. Gen. William C. Sennett, who is to submit a preliminary report to him today.

Names Withheld In addition, he said, Sennett and Geary have been instructed not to divulge the identities of the students or the school involved until the entire investigation is completed.

He added that he did not ask for and had not been told the names of the students.

The first disclosure of the blinding incident was reported in an Associated Press dispatch from Washington last Friday, based on a report from Norman Yoder, State C. ommissioner for the Blind, to the U.S. Health, Education and Welfare Department.

Shafer said one aim of the Sennett investigation was to determine why the incident was not reported to the proper law enforcement or drug regulating agencies.

"I think it was the duty of the individual involved to bring this to the attention of the attorney general or the State Police," the governor declared. "I don't know why this wasn't done."

At the same time, Shafer said he could understand Yoder's reluctance to make the case or the identities of the students public.

Rehabilitation "Dr. Yoder, who is blind himself, is the foremost expert in that state on rehabilitation of the blind. His primary concern was the rehabilitation of the young students. He took the humanitarian approach and I can understand his position."

Campus Flu Rate Up

Dr. Albert L. Ingram, Director of University Health Services, said yesterday that the University is not in the throes of a flu epidemic.

The number of confinements, however, for what Dr. Ingram described as "diffused upper respiratory infections" is well above average. Fifty-four students were detained overnight in Ritenour Health Center last Thursday, the largest number this term. The average for this season is usually between 23 and 25, Dr. Ingram said. A year ago yesterday, Ritenour hospitalized 22 people. "The average always increases at the end of the fall term and now because of the weather conditions," he added.

The rise in illness due to influenza compares in no aspect to the epidemic of October, 1958, when over 3,000 students were stricken with respiratory infections, mostly influenza. During the epidemic Ritenour serviced an average of 110 people daily, its emergency capacity, for two weeks.

Throughout the last few months medical authorities have warned the public of the possibilities of flu outbreaks in the middle Atlantic states. Several Eastern cities, New York in particular, have already experienced flu epidemics.

When asked if the reported "diffused upper-respiratory infections" were the same thing as the flu, Dr. Ingram replied that he couldn't be sure until he saw the laboratory results which won't be available for another month.

Dr. Ingram said, however, that some students are obviously experiencing "flu-like illnesses." He was hesitant about calling the illness influenza because he said most students are well within 48 hours while those stricken with flu are usually sick longer.

But what if an epidemic does occur? Can Ritenour handle it? "We're prepared from the standpoint of medication. We'll have teams of physicians. We're working closely with food and housing, and if an outbreak occurs, proper diets will be prepared and students can be cared for in their residence halls," said Dr. Ingram.

Ritenour's expanded bed capacity is a maximum of 110. Normally there are approximately 40 beds available for men and 25 for women students.

Also discussed at the meeting were plans for a speaker for the spring commencement. There is some controversy over the feasibility of having a commencement speaker, as it would prolong the ceremony by a half hour, plus posing problems if it is held in two sessions in Recreation Building. The class would like to hear the opinions of the seniors on this matter. Anyone who is interested in being on a committee to evaluate the proposal should contact Mike Hobbs or leave his name at the HUB desk.

The Class of 1968 will hold a dance Friday, Feb. 9, from 8:30 to 12:30 in the HUB ballroom. The dance will feature "The Living". Free gifts of perfume and candy will be given to the girls by the La Vie Belles.

English Group Here Tuesday

By MARTHA HARE

Collegian News Editor

The Royal Philharmonic Orchestra of London, recognized as one of the world's greatest symphonic groups, will perform music by Britten, Stravinsky and Brahms in a Recreation Building concert beginning at 8:30 Tuesday night.

Here under the auspices of the University Artists Series, the Orchestra is making its third concert tour of North America since 1950.

Tickets will be available free to students beginning at 1:30 p.m. today at the Hetzel Union desk. Distribution will continue until 5 p.m. Monday. Tickets will be sold to non-students for $1.50 between 9 a.m. and 5 p.m. tomorrow through Tuesday.

Vaclav Neumann, conductor of the renowned Gewandhaus Orchestra of Leipzig, Germany, is serving as principal conductor during the RPO's 22-city tour, which will include performances in Washington, D.C., Philadelphia, Montreal and New York City's Carnegie Hall.

The Royal Philharmonic was founded by the late Sir Thomas Beecham and is widely acknowledged as the growing achievement of his long and distinguished career. The last of the great orchestral organizations established by Sir Thomas, it included the cream of British musicians and was immediately successful.

Internationally known because of its many tours and recordings, the RPO was recently titled "the best orchestra in the country" by the music critic of the Times of London.

The Orchestra's patron in Britain is Queen Mother Elizabeth, widow of King George VI. The right to use "Royal" in the name was conferred on the orchestra in 1966 by special decree of Queen Elizabeth II.

The RPO will present the "Symphonic Requiem" of Benjamin Britten, Igor Stravinsky's "Firebird" and Symphony #4, Op. 98, composed by Johannes Brahms.

Britten is one of England's most prominent living composers, known primarily in this country for such operas as "Billy Budd" and "Peter Grimes." However, the "Requiem" was written and premiered here and received much critical acclaim.

It contains three movements, "Lacrymosa," or lament, "Dies Irae," or dance of death, and "Requiem Aeternam."

The "Firebird" is one of Stravinsky's best-loved ballet suites and the work which launched his career. Based on Russian folk tales, the music shows a strong Russian character and the influence of Rimsky-Korsakov and Moussorgsky.

The Brahms symphony is one of the great staples of concert repertoire. Showing a characteristically Romantic flow and melody, it reflects the moods of the quiet summers in the small German village where Brahms composed it.

Pollard said that his speech had stirred up considerable debate on campus, which was its primary purpose. However he claimed to have been misinterpreted on several points.

"I define Academic Freedom as the freedom to listen to anybody . . . When, through premeditated, deliberate action, one group of students denies the rights to listen to a significant minority of others, they are disrupting the University and, under due process, are liable to be suspended." He emphasized that he was speaking as a member of the faculty rather than for the administration.

Pollard was asked why it is less evil to disrupt a class when drunk, or for the fun of it, than for a moral principle? "It's the difference between an accident and premeditation," he said. "One is unpremeditated, the other takes into account human error."

If we who don't approve let you listen to Timothy Leary talk about his chemicals, you should be willing to let MacNamara talk about his chemicals. A person who prevents others from listening has earned suspension," he said. "Disruption is the only right students have as they have no voice in the process being (Continued on page three)

A Thought to Gifts

The Class of '68 has now reached the climactic point in the history of all classes, the event to which most class governments devote the better part of four years of planning — the selection of the traditional, and traditionally useless, class gift.

Thus far the University has received as tokens of esteem from her departing classes such gifts as a nonoperative sundial, a recording of Big Ben for Old Main's tower, a water fountain and park benches for the mall and a rather nice Alexander Calder mobile, unfortunately displayed to the worst possible advantage in the lobby of the Arts building.

Depending on how the plans of this year's graduating class materialize, the University may receive lights for Beaver Stadium, bleachers for the baseball field or real chimes for Old Main.

All of which are nice frills, but nothing noteworthy and nothing that has anything at all to do with the nature of a University — namely education.

The American penchant for the tangible rears its head at gift-ballooning time as classes almost invariably opt for buying something good and solid that can be anchored in concrete somewhere on campus, marked with a plaque bearing the name of the generous donors and left to make little mark on the University community.

So the usual suggestions of additions to the University's already vast and expensive physical plant are generally met with the greatest enthusiasm and the usual suggestions of the allocation of funds for library books and scholarship programs are labeled dull and imaginative and dismissed after perfunctory consideration.

It is an attitude reminiscent of grammar school pupils' eagerness to be done with all things academic as soon as the first day of summer vacation dawns.

But students who have experienced the frustration of finding huge gaps in Pattee's holdings in a field of particular interest to them or who have struggled through school on the barest of budgets should realize that the most welcome gift any class can bestow on the University is one which makes some contribution to the educational process and to future generations of students.

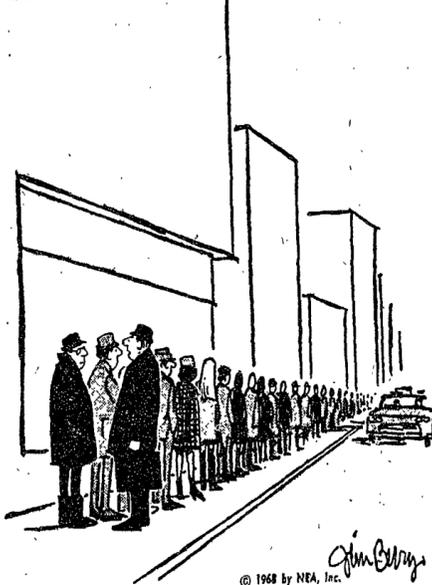

But if the usual suggestions of books and scholarship funds seem too trite, classes considering the selection of class gifts might give some thought to finding a new revolutionary means of improving education at the University.

Classes might consider the possibility of endowing a visiting lectureship to be filled by a prominent scholar, statesman or artist. Such a program would increase students' contact with the world outside and provide a valuable enrichment to formal courses.

With the help of expert guidance and enthusiastic promotion class leaders could no doubt arrive at a number of proposals for useful and creative class gifts that would contribute to the educational process in an exciting manner.

And they would be the kind of gifts that in later years would provide much more than a static memento of a long-departed class.

Letter to the Editor

More on Protests

TO THE EDITOR: This letter is in response to Miss Wertheimer's article concerning the adoption of Prof. Pollard's suggestion to suspend students who engage in disruptive protests. The article itself reflects no more than a belief that student power is and should not become a reality. The argument as stated proposes the adoption of a parochial-type solution to a modern problem.

At the basis the argument supporting the adoption of such a ruling implies that there exists a dichotomy between the institution (Penn State) and the people who comprise that institution (students). This type of assumption has serious consequences if it is believed and advanced by either teachers or students, since it must affect all areas of the student-faculty relationship.

The solution to the non-existent problem advocated by Prof. Pollard is a reflection of the deterrent theory similar to that used in support of capital punishment. Miss Wertheimer, however, stretched the deterrent aspects of the argument and included an associational irrelevance criterion in other words, since it is only when large numbers of students are effectively involved that protests are meritorious, the fact that protests at Penn State have not been large in number (or occurrence) means that they should not be allowed.

The most obvious criticism of this type of reasoning is applying it against itself and questioning why any action is needed if large scale demonstrations are legitimate and if small scale protests have no effect.

The other side of the coin must also be examined, that being that what Prof. Pollard really proposes is a piece of preventative propaganda aimed at instilling the fear of God (as articulated by the University Senate) into the student body.

The passage by any University body of such a broadly applicable rule would leave all students at the mercy of an arbitrary interpretation of what is meant by "disruptive activity". How long would it be until football games were considered disruptive, or fraternity parties, or even any action by student government (which is concerned with a number of similar problems to those of the protestors).

It is a tragic picture of academic life when a University group, composed mostly of faculty members, has allowed itself to be coerced into even considering such an obviously archaic proposal and has left a great number for treatment as intelligent human beings.

The consideration of such a proposal can hardly be of responsible students to their own resources in the fight considered as responsible action given its abrupt and arbitrary nature and can do little to breed a student-faculty rapport. This is also a very surprising attitude given that there has been so little participation in any protest that could be used as a basis for warranting the need for such "overkill" tactics.

Isn't it amazing that the leaders of the University will go to extreme lengths to prohibit people from even possibly expressing contrary and divergent opinions, and yet will openly flaunt enforcement of the drinking regulations at football games?

So far as can be discerned it would appear that the University is heading toward the possible adoption of an illogical, irresponsible and unneeded proposal. We urge the members of the Senate to consider this proposal in light of valid criteria and not accept this unwarranted, arbitrary and intrusive suggestion.

TO THE EDITOR: We, the officers of Students For State feel that it is time to define the goals and functions of our organization.

The purpose of Students For State is to promote spirit in all forms concerning athletic activities.

It is common knowledge to all Penn State students that in the past, Penn State spirit existed somewhat precariously. Until this year, pep rallies were held sparingly. A prominent Penn State campus leader, Jon Fox, along with a few other interested students decided it was time to find the lost state of mind, known as spirit. The student group banded together and initiated the new organization, known today as Students For State.

Throughout the football season, Students For State organized pre-game and post-game pep rallies for both home and away football games.

In conjunction with The Daily Collegian, SFS, co-sponsored a banner contest the weekend of the North Carolina State game. Along with the banner contest, the student group printed "Beat North Carolina State" circulars.

Among the other activities sponsored by SFS were: an East Hall Extravaganza, featuring Coach Joe McMullen and seven varsity football team members; the writing of an official song to be sung at pep rallies and the football games; the sale of buttons in honor of the football teams' bowl bid acceptance.

The most significant achievement of SFS last term was an excursion trip to the Gator Bowl which enabled 95 Penn State students and fans to go to the bowl game.

On agenda for this term are such events as a varsity athletic dinner, a Miss Spirit 1968 contest, a Penn State lover-button sale, and plans for an SFS section at the home basketball games.

We, the officers of SFS, feel that our organization has made some attempt to revive spirit on the campus. We feel that within the next few years, Penn State students will disband their apathetic views and become spirited.

We also realize that a change will not occur over night but we feel that with the progress made last term, brighter days will soon appear.

Students For State invite all interested students to join the organization and help us in our cause to lower the apathetic attitude on campus.

Project Suggestion

TO THE EDITOR: Being 6'0" and weighing 185 pounds certainly gives me less of an advantage when "skiing" to class early in the morning. It seems that the current stand on snow removal from walks is that "the bigger they are the harder they fall!"

During my short career as a snow shoveler from Abington I learned that people slip, fall and injure themselves if snow is not properly removed.

University gravel does not contribute duly, for it neglects to dissolve the trampled particles of snow which have formed slick ice.

It would be advantageous for the University or USG or MRC or AWS or SDS or anyone to take immediate action for ice removal instead of letting students slip and make three-point landings before someone is seriously injured.

Shafer Speaks On LSD Case

(Continued from page one) understand that," Shafer said. Asked if he believes the students would serve the public interest by making themselves known and discussing what happened, Shafer replied:

"I think that would depend upon the individual case. The more we can do to prevent the use of LSD, the better. But we have to protect the students and this is a complicating factor. I have been reliably informed that identifying them would not be good for them since some still are undergoing psychiatric care."

Shafer said so far as he knew, the students were blinded in March or April of 1966, and came to the state for vocational rehabilitation in June of that year.

An Open Secret
He said there was no evidence that college authorities or others attempted to keep the incident secret.

The governor added that neither former Gov. William W. Scranton, former Welfare Secretary Max Rosen nor former Attorney General Walter Alessandrini, now deceased, nor Edward Friedman, knew of the case.

Sennett and Georges only learned of it last Friday, he added.

The six victims were all male, Shafer said, but explained that he had no information on the origin of the LSD.

"The ingredients of LSD are available to anyone interested in advanced chemistry," he noted.

He said possession of LSD was prosecutable under state law, but added that whether any would be undertaken must await completion of the investigation.

"It would be up to the local law enforcement agencies to determine whether the boys had already been punished enough," Shafer concluded.

Junior Class Discusses 'Lion Project,' Beauties

Discussion of the class gift and the Junior Class Queen Contest was the main concern of the Class of '69 meeting last night in the Hetzel Union Building Assembly Room.

The report on "Lion Project," the name given to the class gift idea of buying two lion cubs to be displayed somewhere on campus and at football games, has been completed. It is now awaiting approval by the University.

Mitch Work, president of the class, reported that the annual class queen contest will be held Feb. 2, in conjunction with a jammy that night. At that time, 17 finalists will be presented, and those attending the jammy will vote.

The finalists will be selected on the basis of beauty, poise, intelligence, personality, and responses to the judges' questions. The winner will receive a trophy and a gift certificate.

Work also reported that plans call for the class bumper stickers, reading "Always on Top, Penn State '69ers," to be placed on sale in the HUB for 25c.

Pollard Defends Suspension Proposal

Douglas Cooper, chairman of YAF, suggested that "... when you go in as saboteurs, you take your punishment or raise an army."

Pollard stated that he has no objection to discussing anything on a University campus, even racial differences. "The problems come in when you stop allowing discussion. What was done to Dean Rusk is what Hitler did to the Jews—deny them the right of free discourse."

Pollard concluded by affirming that "the University is worth more than a few people." It represents those whose labor support it and it must provide for students who will come later, he said. "There is nothing more important to humanity than the University, and people who believe they are more right than everybody else belong somewhere else."

After Pollard's talk there was a brief business meeting. Philip Abbott Luce's visit was announced for Feb. 3. YAF will participate in a debate on Vietnam in two weeks. A forum on drugs, sponsored by YAF, will be held Jan. 31 in the HUB Assembly Room.

Applications For Tutoring

Applications for the Undergraduate Student Government Association tutoring service will be available today on the ground floor of the Hetzel Union Building, from 9:30 to 12:30.

Double Jeopardy Bill Tops USG Agenda

A bill to protect students from double jeopardy for off-campus arrests will be proposed at tonight's meeting of the Undergraduate Student Government.

"Now there is the possibility of a student being tried and punished twice for the same crime," according to USG President Jeff Long. If passed, the bill would eliminate a University tribunal trial in such a situation.

Also on the agenda is the Hetzel Union Building Committee Amendment. The amendment proposes to remove the HUB committee chairman from USG Congress on the grounds that he does not represent a definite student group or organization.

The Congress Committee's Act, which could not be implemented last term, will also be discussed.

Its purpose is to increase the efficiency of the Congressmen by acquainting them with proposed legislation and by permitting them to submit written suggestions for changes in proposed legislation.

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Gary Visconti has his orders, from the Navy—win the National figure skating title, and be selected to the 1968 Olympic and World teams.

Visconti begins his mission today as the four-day U.S. Figure Skating championships begin at the Spectrum. He'll demonstrate his skills in compulsory events against the challenges of Scott Allen, Tim Wood and a host of other top American skaters.

Perky Peggy Fleming, the world singles champion, glides into action tomorrow in the women's compulsory figures, a big favorite to outclass the nation's No. 2 and 3 ranked female skaters for the national title, an Olympic berth, and a chance to defend her international championship.

The best U.S. Olympic figure skating team since America's top performers were killed in the 1961 airplane crash in Brussels, Belgium, is expected to emerge from the competition. The pairs teams for the Olympics starting Feb. 6 in Grenoble, France, will be announced here after tomorrow night's senior pairs competition and the men's and women's singles representatives after Saturday night's skating.

The dance teams for the World championships at Switzerland on Feb. 27, will be disclosed Sunday afternoon. There are no dance events in the Olympics.

Visconti, of the Detroit Skating Club, now on active duty with the U.S. Naval Reserve, and has been given leave to compete in the nationals. Navy officials in Washington said he would be made available for the Olympics and the World Tournament if he makes the teams.

Scott Allen, Harvard University, freshman from Smoke Rise, N.J., senior men's singles champion in 1964 and 1966, and loser to Visconti in 1965 and 1967, is expected to give the Detroit skater his closest competition. Allen, from the Skating Club of New York, is ranked second nationally, just ahead of Wood, a Detroit Skating club teammate of Visconti. Other challengers in the men's singles include eastern champion Pat Lalor of Philadelphia, Midwest champion Duane Maki of Detroit, and John Misha Petkovich, the Pacific king from Great Falls, S.D.

Also slated for the first day is competition in the novice ladies' figures with Melissa Militano of the Long Island Club of Indianapolis, and Teri Beckerman, Los Angeles Figure Skating Club, the main contenders.

Lise Gantz of the Philadelphia Skating Club, Wen-An Sun from the Broadmoor Club of Colorado Springs, and Barbara Ray of the El Camino Club, Burlingame, Calif., are expected to vie for the Junior ladies' figures today, with James P. Webb of the Skating Club of Boston, Tim Flynn from Denver, and Bon Stephens of Los Angeles the headliners in novice men's competition.

The final event of the opening program is the silver dance initial, an event which features the nation's No. 1 ranked pair of Susan Likert and Charles Morgan of Anaheim, Calif., against the No. 2 rated duo of Barbara Swade and James Mills of the Chicago Skating Club.

HOW WIDESPREAD IS DRUG USAGE AMONG STUDENTS?

WILL IT IMPAIR THEIR ABILITIES IN BUSINESS?

MOTOROLA INC.

Miss Barbara Caulfield
Northwestern University
Evanston, Illinois

Dear Miss Caulfield

I have been asked the question, what do businessmen know about college students? A greater insight into campus life-styles and attitudes will certainly help businessmen obtain a better understanding of students—many of whom will be entering business. We in business probably have some erroneous notions, just as correspondence I have received has shown me that campus attitudes toward business are not always based on correct information.

For example, I would like a better perspective on the use of drugs on campus. Are the reports true that more and more students are relying on drugs to stimulate creative thought and as a means of escape?

Just how widespread is drug usage in colleges today? One day we read that the reports are over-exaggerated, another day that the problems have been understated. I find myself wondering to what extent—to what degree of frequency—are drugs used by their campus advocates, and to what actual meaningful end. Is their use purposeful, or merely a crutch and an "experience"?

The question of drug usage on campus is more than a casual subject to businessmen. Business requires a steady influx of men with vision, imagination, fresh ideas, new approaches, and we are turning to the brighter graduates going into industry and business to satisfy these needs.

When the young man enters the business world (or any other vocation), will he give up using drugs and other psychedelic stimulations? Or has their use become an intrinsic part of his life-style?

On the other hand, supposing the student, when he embarks on a career, forsakes the drug habit which he presumes stimulated his creativity on campus. Will he still be able to generate imaginative approaches to business problems?

Another point I would like clarified is that of compatibility with those with whom he must come in contact in a business career. Will he have become so accustomed to companions whose mental processes are stimulated artificially that he will be unable to communicate with, and feel empathetic toward, his business contemporaries?

I would like your thoughts on this drug question.

Sincerely,

Robert W. Galvin

In September, I invited four students whose photos appear above to participate in a continuing dialogue concerning the pros and cons of business. The resulting correspondence with Miss Barbara Caulfield has been appearing in this campus newspaper and others. Likewise with the other three dialogists, their letters to me and my responses appear in various campus papers.

In one of his letters, the Princeton University participant, Mr. Paul Sittenfeld, asked me: "What do businessmen know about college students?" He posed an essential question. Businessmen should know more about students—about their views and opinions, their attitudes. This is just as important as students knowing more about business.

Many men in business have stereotyped impressions of students, just as students have of businessmen. Words such as "bearded"—"protesting"—"permissive"—are used as descriptive of students, just as "gray flannel"—"profit-hungry"—"anti-intellectual"—are tagged to businessmen.

In an effort to increase the mutual understanding between the campus and the corporation, I plan, from time to time in this Dialogue Program, to ask questions and raise issues as well as to respond to those of the student dialogists.

It is my hope that such an exchange will help correct some of the erroneous impressions that exist.

It Started on the Closet Door

By RON KOLB
Assistant Sports Editor

When little Jeffrey Persson was 4 years old, his Dad brought home a present for him. It was a miniature basketball hoop and a little ball to go with it. Dad tacked it up on Jeff's bedroom closet door, and every night when his parents sent him to bed, Jeff would throw the little ball through the tiny hoop.

At the time, Jeff never even knew there were bedrooms where you could throw the ball through a hoop before 7,500 people. He didn't know of closet doors ten feet tall with glass backboards. And he didn't realize that anyone could become famous just by playing a game.

It's been 17 years since the youngster got a first taste of James Naismith's invention. Yet he's still tossing balls through a hoop, and he's doing it well. So well, in fact, that within the next few games he should become the fifth-highest scorer in Penn State history, reaching the 1,000-point plateau.

Persson needs just 102 points to achieve that distinction. Then he'll be in the same class with Jesse Arnelle, who from 1952 to 1955 scored 2,138; Carver Clinton, the Selma, Ala. whiz who ended his career two years ago with 1,165; Mark DuMars, who scored 1,139 between 1959 and 1961; and Bob Weiss, the Seattle Supersonics star who as a Lion scored 1,091 from 1963 to 1965.

The 6-3, 195 pounder didn't always pledge his loyalties to the Blue and White. His father, G. J.

Persson, who Jeff says "influenced me most in playing the sport," took down the little hoop from the closet door and instead treated his son to college basketball games at the University of Pittsburgh, that other Pennsylvania institution.

"I really thought I wanted to go there," Jeff said. "But later I visited the school, and no one seemed to care whether I went there or not. So I didn't."

He still had plenty of time to decide, however, and not without the influence of other outside sources. While playing at Sharon High School, about 70 miles north of Pittsburgh, Persson was trailed by scouts from all over — Villanova, Florida State, William and Mary, Wichita, Minnesota, Iowa, Ohio State and a few other Big Ten schools.

As a high school sophomore he played guard, as a junior he was a forward, and in his senior year he sparked the offense as a 6-2 pivot man. Sharon finished with a 17-4 record that year, and their star racked up the statistics. In 23 games, he scored 523 points for a 23.8 average, breaking all school scoring records previously set by DuMars. Besides, United Press International chose Persson on its All-Pennsylvania team in 1964, along with stars like North Carolina's Larry Miller, formerly of Catasauqua.

Ironically, Persson's choice to head for University Park was greatly influenced by the present sports information director at — you guessed it, Pitt. Dean Billick, a former Daily Collegian sports editor, convinced Jeff that PSU had the most promising basketball future (Clinton and Weiss were underclassmen.) The campus was also close to home, and the educational facilities were inviting.

As a guard under Coach John Egli's method at State, Persson had some great moments his first two varsity years. He averaged 13.7 points as a sophomore, hitting a game-winning hook shot at the buzzer to beat Syracuse by a point. As a junior last season he led the team in scoring (17.6 per game), also hitting 102 of 119 foul shots.

At the end of last year, it came time for the players to choose the 1967-68 team captain, and Persson was a unanimous choice. "Actually," recalls Jeff, "I was the only senior on the team, so it wasn't too hard to pick."

And thus is his manner. He's as outspoken as Harpo Marx and as conceited as Wally Cox. When asked if he'd score the 102 points Saturday against West Virginia, he replied, "Well, I shoot enough." Actually, if he misses his first shot, he'll be reluctant to try another one the rest of the game.

"Being captain gives me a lot more responsibility," Persson added. "I have to make sure I'm hustling all the time so the others will follow. I guess I'm sort of their leader."

For the last few games, he's been just that. The Lions have won three in a row, employing a tenacious shifting zone defense and a hustling Jeff Persson. "I like my switch to forward this season," he said, "because I can get in there and push for some rebounds."

What's this, modest and quiet Jeff Persson getting rough? Considering he's averaging 18.6 points per game and is tied for the team lead in rebounds (81), Dr. Jekyll apparently turns into Mr. Hyde on the basketball court.

An accounting major, Persson intends to schedule a few job interviews this term. However, if a pro offer is waved in front of him, he said he just might try his luck.

But for a guy who learned one-on-one drives, 25-foot set shots and pressure rebounding on the closet door of his bedroom, luck plays an insignificant part.

NCAA Scraps Last Year's Punt Rule

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla. (AP) — The sucker shift, clipping along the line of scrimmage, and faked fair catches were outlawed in college football yesterday by the rules committee of the National Collegiate Athletic Association.

The committee also yielded to a strong demand from college coaches and abolished a one-year-old rule allowing only ends and backs to go downfield under punts with the snap of the ball.

Committee chairman Ivan B. Williamson, athletic director of the University of Wisconsin, said the new regulations "will make football a safer game."

The sucker shift was eliminated by prohibiting interior linemen from moving once they assume a position in the line. Under the old rule, the lineman frequently shifted for the purpose of drawing the opposition players offside.

The committee said it led to frequent injuries, and caused one fatality last season in California, because players pulled offside sometimes are hit before they can return to their position and get set for the play.

In the past, clipping has been legal in a zone along the line of scrimmage. Many flankers took advantage of this rule by starting wide, then cutting back into the neutral zone to clip a linebacker.

Under the new rule no player five yards or more outside this zone may enter it at the snap of the ball.

The new rule on fair catches prohibits the man who signals from throwing a block while the ball is in play. Williamson said the fake fair catch signal was being used more and more often so that the signaler could block enemy players coming down field. He said this was considered unfair because the signaler cannot be touched by players on the other side and injuries were resulting.

Under the new rule on punt coverage, all players on the kicking team are free to go downfield when the ball is snapped.

College football coaches had protested bitterly against the rule used last season for fear that it would result in a rash of injuries among the ends and backs. This didn't happen. Williamson said the committee returned to the 1966 rule because so many of the coaches wanted it.

Opportunities Unlimited... GOP Sponsors Seminar

By JOHN SHORT
Collegian Staff Writer

According to William Cromer, president of the Republican Club, "Opportunities Unlimited," a one-day conference sponsored by the Republican National Committee, will amount to a "seminar—to get you to understand public life."

With panel discussions on careers in communication, business, government and politics, social service and the professions, "Opportunities Unlimited" will offer a program "for American college students who want to play a part in shaping the world in which they live," according to the Republican National Committee.

Ray C. Bliss, Republican National Committee chairman, has called the conference "a sincere attempt on the part of the Republican National Committee to stimulate an increase in the flow and caliber of potential leadership talent."

With approximately 1,000 students at the University having received invitations to attend the session, he said, the organization will consider chartering buses for the one-day conference at Dickinson.

On the University's chapter of the Republican Club itself, Cromer said, according to the text of a speech to have been delivered, "Unlike other so-called political organizations, which are actually pressure groups, we are part of a national political organization. Under the new constitution we are no longer Young Republicans, but we are a Republican Club which now comes directly under the influence of the senior party."

The purpose of the club, Cromer said, is "to contribute to the growth and influence of the Republican party among students in universities and colleges in Pennsylvania; and to promote good government."

Concerning the political outlooks and views of the club, Cromer said, "Like our senior party, we as members of the Penn State club have been known to deal with the individual's intelligence through our ability and our dignity. We have been criticized for our idealism, but that is our key word; for after idealism comes action and action puts our members in a position where they can prove that the Republican party is the vanguard of social and economic development through our country."

"No longer are we a party that says 'no' to the present. No longer are we a party that opposes, but a party that proposes. We are a party that is committed to improving the quality of American life," Cromer concluded.

Elected last night were Jeff Bower (8th - general arts and sciences - Leont), first vice president; Carol Kehler (11th-secondary education-Shamokin), second vice president; Robert Jeffrey (5th-liberal arts-York), treasurer. Other officers include Diane Moore, secretary; Ruth Frishman, recording secretary; and Cromer, chairman.
