

The Backlash

THE BACKLASH has begun. Throughout the nation, government officials and university administrators have begun to methodically crack down on student dissent.

University officials, frightened and confused by spreading campus disorder, are becoming more and more prone to restore bogus tranquility the easy way—through force.

At many universities, including Columbia, Wisconsin and Duke, the administrations called police on campus at the first sign of disorder.

AND, AS DUKE'S provost observed after the police tear-gassed students there, once the police are on campus, "they are under nobody's direct jurisdiction."

But even more frightening than the college administrators' overreaction to disorder has been the response of local and state government.

In Wisconsin, the mayor of Madison called up the National Guard, an almost unprecedented and completely unnecessary action which is generally considered to have prolonged and intensified the riot.

IN CALIFORNIA, more than 50 bills designed to quell campus disorder have been submitted to the state legislature. Gov. Ronald Reagan has promised to declare a state of "extreme emergency" at the first sign of disturbance on California's many troubled campuses. This would give him an excuse to call state police to the scene of disorder, and win him the loyal support at the polls of the state's large reactionary population.

It is this latter aspect of the government reaction which is most degrading to the integrity of the University. Though attempts by the state governments to impinge on the autonomy and academic freedom of the universities are inherently intolerable, they are made more so by the fact that many of their sponsors are merely politicking.

In this time of what Newsweek magazine calls "patricidal warfare," to condemn student demonstrators is to assure oneself the vote of their middle class parents.

IT WAS MORE than coincidence that in the midst of legislative and voter reaction to his proposed budget, Gov. Raymond Shafer suddenly made a speech saying that he would not tolerate student disruption in Pennsylvania and would use state police to put down student rebels if necessary.

Currently before the state Senate is a bill which would imprison for three months any student who "wilfully annoys, disturbs, taunts, assaults or molests any student, employee, administrator, agent or any other person" even vaguely connected with a public school or university.

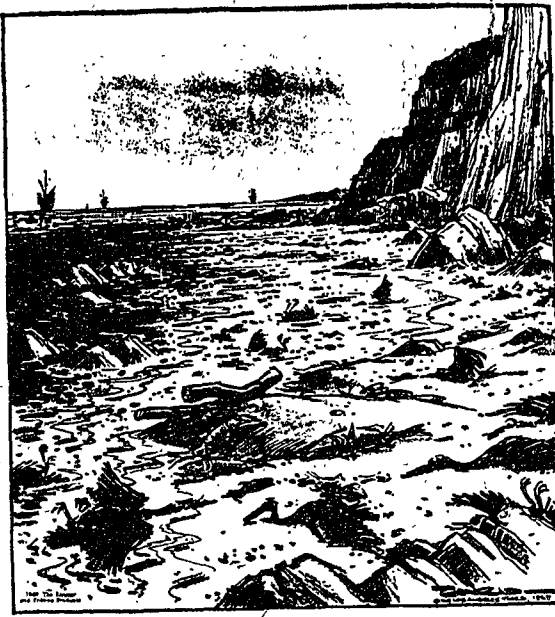

Under this fascist and probably unconstitutional bill, any student who dared to talk back to a professor would be eligible for arrest. Almost every student organization, including The Daily Collegian, Undergraduate Student Government and Douglass Association, can be said to have "annoyed" the Administration at one time or another. The purpose of this bill is clearly to, first, please the constituency of the 40 senators sponsoring it and, second, to give the state a free hand to interfere in University affairs.

A READING assemblyman, referring to obscenity and slurs against the Legislature in a University of Pittsburgh newspaper, concisely expressed many legislators' position. State-supported universities, he said, should either "clean-up" their publications and suppress all demonstrations or the Legislature should withhold financial aid.

And we suspect that Vice President for Student Affairs Charles L. Lewis was partly prompted by fear that if he didn't act, Harrisburg would.

It is a sorrowful commentary on the courage and conviction of the University Administration that it feels obligated to adjust their policies to satisfy the political campaigns of a clique of reactionary legislators.

The fact that the Legislature contributes money to the operation of this University does not give it the right to meddle in the University's affairs for its own narrow political purposes.

Faculty Forum

Concerned?

By THOMAS G. FOX
Assistant Professor of Economics

On the subject of faculty understanding of student organization goals and academic policy I feel compelled to challenge Professor Lattman's assertion that the "faculty is unconcerned and disconnected" (as reported in Marc Klein's Collegian column, 2/12/69). I challenge with the counter-assertion that a substantial (though admittedly unknown) proportion of the faculty is both concerned and reasonably well-informed.

Some faculty members may not agree with selected student organization objectives. And most may not feel impelled to attend student organization meetings so that the Collegian's "faculty-body-count" will yield impressive figures. But the existence of either or both of these possibilities is not valid evidence of an "unconcerned and disconnected" faculty.

Lattman Informed
This writer, most of his colleagues in the economics department, others he is acquainted with elsewhere within the University, and Professor Lattman are concerned and reasonably well-informed. Professor Lattman's remarks during the Douglass Association's Rap-In reflect his interest, as does his enviable reputation.

Well, how does one assess faculty positions on various issues? What are the relevant criteria which must be satisfied before one can say, "The opinion of the faculty is..."? Remember, the faculty is at least as heterogeneous as the "student body" so some limited degree of faculty "disconnection" should be expected.

Surely "faculty-body-counts" at the Rap-In (as presented by Marc Klein) are next to useless as indicators of either the general level of faculty understanding or degree of empathy with the Douglass Association's position. The level of student participation at the Rap-In was not substantially higher than the relative level of faculty participation (400 to 600 students out of 25,000). But I assert that most of the student body were aware of what was going on, even though they were not attending.

"Willingness"
On the other hand, understanding and concern does not automatically imply a faculty "willingness" to attempt to change any given situation. Many faculty members undoubtedly believe that other faculty members will seek to accomplish a desirable goal and will therefore refrain from personal activity. But then if all reach this conclusion when considering any specific activity, no one "stands up to be counted" and the improper conclusion is drawn by others that the faculty is "unconcerned and disconnected."

As the Collegian is the major source of information to students and faculty—with respect to the University, I suggest that the Collegian undertake a careful survey in order to determine whether or not the average Penn State faculty member is in fact "unconcerned and disconnected." If the survey result is counter to my assertion, then Penn State has a problem which is substantially more important than any other at this time, including the totally unsatisfactory racial composition of the student body.

Perhaps the belief that the faculty is really concerned reflects my naively or faulty connections. But until shown otherwise, I prefer to interpret Professor Lattman's remark as an assertion instead of a factual statement.

PRESIDENT?!? Regurgitated pap is what they offer! I tell you the time has come for a change, Milton Shapp or William Scranton won't do! We need a new breed of cat for University President; a bawdy, gaudy, Hippie, Yippie, Masochistic mystic — Yea Veril and I'm available (at reasonable rates).

Forward fellow students, let us join our voices in rebellion. Let us trample from the footpaths of our elders, stampeding to the altar of anarchy. Let us raise a frozen finger toward the towers of our past. Let us arm and arm singing songs of prurient filth, linking our bodies for peace.

We are children of a new age; we are fathers of yet a newer age. Shall we stand as stagnant bay-leaves in a turbulent flow of cynicism? Or shall we storm the very gates of Hell to slay another Cerberus. Oh the bell tolls for you mankind; see God has died from overweight, and his son was shot for speeding... Let us pray for God, sheep...

AZEFF

"Who Art in Escrow"
Our freedoms, who art in escrow, hallowed be thy name — All you goddamn hippies get off the grass (yeah grass, grass, grass, causes bad breath, dandruff, athletes' mouth, cancer of the uterus, and spinal meningitis.) Requiescat in concinn pacem freedom of the press. Rest in the time of the saints. (Let us pray for time and saints.) Was it 30 or 3,000 who were castigated for corrupting the morals of Vice President Charles L. Lewis? Let us sing hosannas to our ever watchful guardian.

Drowned in Spit
The Water Tunnel has been drowned in its own spit, and its pungent odor has boiled like a cess pool through the corridors of Old Main. Shall we use an aerosol to cleanse the air? Shall we cover the stench with "Glade" or "Wizard"? Shall we burn incense to the memory of liberty, and to the freedoms of press and selection left unburied in this almighty rotunda of blindness?

Hail to thee dear Alma Mater. May your tortured conscience writhe from cold incipient demons eging at your throat. Bristle, dear old Alma Mater, at a tyrant's heavy fist. And though your end be near, may your journal duly note the demise of the Garfield Thomas Water Tunnel.
"YEA THE WATER TUNNEL IS DEAD: LONG LIVE THE DISTANT DRUMMER!"

Strike a Chord
Gentlemen, you've done it again. You just had to strike a chord for your morality. A morality that will die when you do. How long do you think the Tunnel would have lasted financially if you had left it alone? I mean, give us some credit for taste, okay?

Expelling those misguided misanthropes would taste bad, like imitation sugar, or Ex-Lax. (What saveth thou Christian Bible bangers? Hast thou no compassion for a prodigal?)

Instead of badgering mini minds, why don't you try to solve our racial imbalance by selling "black face" in the HUB? It too would only cover some pimples.

Letters to the Editor

HUB Meeting Stunk, Dr. Keddie

TO THE EDITOR: An open letter to Dr. Keddie: On Tuesday evening I participate in the meeting that you conducted in the HUB ballroom. I feel some obligation to tell you of the anger that you incited in me as a consequence of your manner. On arrival I knew only that Mr. Lewis would appear to answer questions by students. I was disappointed and then alienated by what was a bastardized open meeting.

A faculty run gathering which allows student expression out of charity is not an open meeting. Secondly, you were condescending and bullying in regard to the agreement you had made with Lewis as to the conduct of the meeting. I do not question your right to organize and agree to conditions but I found you insufferable in repeating continually the kinds of statements that suggest by inference that the students are incapable of understanding the conditions. They had the right to violate the agreement and you had the right to close the meeting to students if that happened. It was therefore inappropriate to bully the audience into "behaving."

Thus your remark when Lewis left that we were "beautiful people" was totally uncalled for and provoked me to a "fuck you" under my breath. Finally, the idea expressed by you that students should appreciate the fact that you had arranged Lewis' appearance for their benefit at the cost of some undefined personal expense smacked of a dramatized bid for martyrdom and was insulting to me.

It seems to me that you laid your power on the line in the form of your ability to influence students and your behavior was a direct consequence of the threat to your power base. Influence has been the currency of power for years and it seems to me that as a leader of radicals you cannot maintain your position if you continue that kind of trade. One of the cornerstones of the radical movement would appear to be that issues not influence must determine power. If the students on this campus do in fact organize you are likely to lose your leadership position.

In conclusion, I want you to know that I refused to join the faculty group until after Lewis left because I wanted to feel how it was to be unfranchised in that meeting. It stunk.

Univac: For people who want to help make the world a little bit better
A human condition like hunger may be a good deal harder to fix than a mechanical condition. But then, here at Univac, we believe that the problems most deserving solution are the problems most difficult to solve.
Univac computers are already helping solve some of today's problems. In addition to helping keep track of airline reservations, bank accounts and business inventories, they are now directing traffic, as well as processing scientific and engineering data for Case Western Reserve University.
But the important solutions are still the solutions to come. Which is where you come in. If you're the kind of man who would enjoy spending as much time thinking about increasing the world's supply of food as increasing the world's supply of computers, we may have room for you at Univac. Model U.N. Opens Tonight With Indian Representative

A high ranking diplomat from India will deliver the opening address tonight for the seventh annual Model United Nations.

A. S. Gonsalves, India's Deputy Permanent Representative to the United Nations, the second-ranking post, will speak on "An Indian View of the United Nations and the Issues Confronting It."

The opening ceremonies for the three-day Model U.N. are scheduled for 8 p.m. in the J. Orvis Keller Conference Center.

This year's group will also take up one of the newest and most challenging problems which has come before the real United Nations in years — the problem of trying to formulate international principles to assure that the sea-beds and ocean floors of the world are used exclusively for peaceful purposes.

Atwater is Adviser

"One of the main questions," Elton Atwater, professor of political science and faculty adviser to the Model U.N., said "is to make sure benefits resulting from any exploitation of sea-bed resources are made available to all countries."

"With new scientific methods now in progress, the resources and use of the sea-bed may quickly become subject to competitive appropriation, exploitation and military use by the few countries which have the technical facilities to do so," Atwater continued.

At the suggestion of Malta, the U.N. General Assembly discussed this question at its 1967 and 1968 sessions. It agreed to set up a permanent committee on the sea-bed to proclaim a Decade for Oceanographic Research, and to study appropriate international machinery to oversee any development of the resources of the sea-bed.

"It also agreed on certain safeguards against pollution of the seas, but it has not yet been able to agree on a set of broader principles to assure that the sea-bed is used for the benefit of all nations," he said.

Pick Up Problem

The Penn State Model U.N. will pick up the problem at this point and see if it can agree on a set of principles in this regard.

Approximately 50 students, each representing a different member of the United Nations, will participate in the discussions during the opening session tonight and the full plenary session of the General Assembly Sunday afternoon.

Justin O. Schmidt (11th-chemistry-Boalsburg) who has had several years' experience in the Model U.N., will serve as chairman of the committee considering the sea-bed issue.

A second group, also made up of some 50 delegates, will take up the question of Chinese representation in the General Assembly.

The committee will attempt to draft a resolution on the question of whether or not to seat the Peking Regime and to retain or unseat the Formosa Government which now occupies China's seat.

A Model U.N. Security Council, consisting of the 15 members of the real Security Council, will discuss the question of Soviet occupation in Czechoslovakia during August of 1968.

Peter C. Bowers, (10th-foreign service-Bala-Cynwyd) will serve as president of the 1969 Model U.N.

Open-House Policy, Sign Out Acts Passed

By LINDA McCLAIN

The Association of Women Students voted unanimously last night to pass the AWS Open House Policy and the After-Hours Service Optional Sign-Out Act.

The Open House Policy permits students "to visit rooms of the opposite sex in campus residence halls on a limited basis."

A maximum of 12 open houses may be held per month in each residence hall. Each event must be registered as a social function and approved by the local housing unit. Participation in this program is at the option of local residence units.

The policy states that "guests are to be escorted to the respective rooms and that all pertinent University, local, state and Federal rules are to be observed."

The purpose of the AHS Optional Sign-Out Act is to "amend the Special Rules for Women Students found in the Student Handbook."

The old bill states that sign-out for After-Hours service is optional. But with the new act, as a protection for the welfare of coeds, they are advised to sign out or leave word of their whereabouts if they will be away from the residence hall for the evening.

When there is doubt concerning the whereabouts of a woman student if she has failed to return at the indicated time, the community coordinator may contact the student's home.

The AWS Senate also voted unanimously to send two amended resolutions to USG.

One bill calls for the re-instatement of a solicitation rule which USG outlawed three weeks ago. The purpose of the rule is to protect students from outside fund-raising organizations.

The other resolution stated the Senate's belief in "freedom of expression and exchange of ideas." It suggests a "representative group of faculty, administration and students to determine" such guidelines.

Gayle Graziano, AWS president, said applications for public relations chairman are available at the HUB Desk. They are due on Friday.

Beginning their pledge period in the Alpha Tau chapter are Bernadine Kopec (11th-journalism - McClellandtown), Beverly Tai (graduate-journalism), Carol Chitester (9th-journalism-Mt. Holly, New Jersey) and Kitty Philbin (6th-journalism-Pittsburgh).

Flip Wilson—Host For Spring Awards

Comedian Flip Wilson will act as master-of-ceremonies at the Spring Week Awards Night May 19 at Rec Hall.

Wilson, a recent host on the Johnny Carson Show, will perform a half hour monologue before he presents the awards. Admission to the combined awards night and concert will be $1.25.

Awards Chairman Tom Payne said last night that there will be a 10 per cent discount on duplicate group trophies. There will be a three point deduction from the total point score for every day that carnival skits and money is late and a half point deduction for every dollar spent over the carnival budget, Payne added.

A five dollar deposit fee for the window painting contest will be due April 24. Windows will be painted on a first come first served basis, at a meeting at a later date.

Miss Penn State applicants must be a full time undergraduate student at the University for one year following the date of coronation. A first runner-up will be named in case the winner will not be able to fulfill her obligations. Miss Penn State will be crowned at the awards night and will receive one dozen roses, a tiara and a trophy.

World Campus Afloat, is a college that does more than broaden horizons. It sails to them and beyond.

Once again, beginning in October of 1969, the World Campus Afloat program of Chapman College and Associated Colleges and Universities will take qualified students, faculty and staff into the world laboratory.

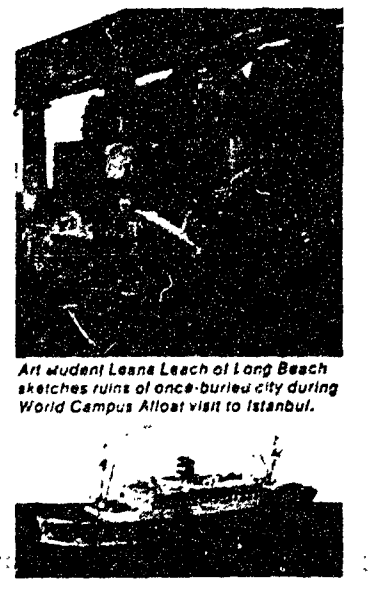

In-port programs relevant to fully-accredited coursework taught aboard ship add the dimension of personal experience to formal learning.

Classes are held six days a week at sea aboard the s.s. Ryndam which has been equipped with classrooms, laboratories, library, student union, dining room and dormitories.

Chapman College now is accepting applications for the Fall and Spring semesters of the 1969-70 academic year. Fall semesters depart New York for ports in Western Europe and the Mediterranean, Africa and South America, ending in Los Angeles. Spring semesters circle the world from Los Angeles through the Orient, India and South Africa to New York.

Final Exam Schedule for Winter Term

A multi-column grid listing exam times (e.g., 8:00, 9:00, 10:00) for various departments and courses. Includes sections for Accounting, Business, Engineering, and Arts.

The final class meeting schedule for the Winter Term will begin on Sat., March 15, and end on Wed., March 19, according to a schedule published yesterday by the University Scheduling Office.

The final class meeting period is a required meeting time for classes. It will be 10 minutes in length.

Final class meeting periods have been set according to a predetermined schedule. The Scheduling Office said changes in final class meeting periods will be authorized.

No review, makeup, tutorial, or other type of extra class session can be scheduled after 5:00 p.m. during the 10-week term.

Practicum Classes Rescheduled

The standard 75 minute period classes which would normally have met on Friday, March 14, and on Saturday, March 15, will be canceled.

Double or triple period laboratory classes normally scheduled for Friday, March 14, and Saturday, March 15, will meet on Friday, March 14. Friday morning practicums will meet for their regularly scheduled number of periods and on their regularly assigned laboratories at their regularly scheduled periods on Friday, March 14.

Practicum Classes Rescheduled

Students who have been assigned to a double or triple period laboratory class normally scheduled for Friday, March 14, and Saturday, March 15, will meet on Friday, March 14.

Filing for Conflicts

Students who have two final class meeting periods at the same time or with more than three class meeting periods on the same day should file a request for a conflict schedule at the University Scheduling Office, 110 Shields, between Monday and next Friday. The fee for filing such a conflict request after 5 p.m. on Friday, Feb. 20, is $1.00.

Students with three final class meeting periods on any one day of the four-day final class meeting period will be assigned to conflict schedules only in those cases in which it has been necessary to create such a class because of direct conflict situations. Accordingly, students may be required to attend as many as three final class meeting periods on the same day.

For purposes of final class meeting period schedule, a day is defined as the period between 8 a.m. and 11 p.m.

Graduating Students

Students who expect to receive their degree at the close of the Winter Term and who have a final class meeting period scheduled for Wed., March 19, should also file a request for a conflict meeting period.

Meeting Period Designations

The interpretation of the final designations used in this final class meeting period is:

S - Saturday, March 15, 8:00 - 9:50 a.m. or 10:10 a.m. to 12 noon
M - Monday, March 17, 8:00 - 9:50 a.m. or 10:10 a.m. to 12 noon
W - Wednesday, March 19, 8:00 - 9:50 a.m. or 10:10 a.m. to 12 noon

9:10 - 9:40 to 10:10 a.m.

The place and period of the final class meeting period for those courses listed "Appt" will be arranged by the instructor at a mutually convenient period, but in no case in conflict with a scheduled final class meeting period of any student's schedule.

If a student has not been requested to announce room assignments for final class meetings designated "See List," he should do so as follows:

S - Saturday, March 15, 8:00 - 9:50 a.m. or 10:10 a.m. to 12 noon
M - Monday, March 17, 8:00 - 9:50 a.m. or 10:10 a.m. to 12 noon
W - Wednesday, March 19, 8:00 - 9:50 a.m. or 10:10 a.m. to 12 noon

Students who expect to receive their degree at the close of the Winter Term and who have a final class meeting period scheduled for Wed., March 19, should also file a request for a conflict meeting period.

Continuation of the exam schedule table, listing departments such as Anthropology, Art, and various sciences.

Makes Own List of Proposals

YAF Supports ROTC

Young Americans for Freedom opposed the "common front" technique being used to get support for student demands at their executive board meeting Tuesday night.

"Some of the leadership, specifically Students for a Democratic Society, is trying to add their particular hang-up, the military on campus, to legitimate student complaints," Dave Ward, a YAF member said.

"They are using popular causes, like letting women have the same rights as men, and deciding dorm hours by vote, to rally support for banning military recruitment from campus and denying credit to ROTC," he said.

Doug Cooper, YAF chairman, spoke at length about the proposal to deny credit to ROTC. "A major argument of the leftists is that the content of military courses is not controlled by the University Senate. First, that isn't really the reason they oppose it; they oppose it because they oppose the Vietnam war. Second, it is irrelevant, since the University gives credit for courses over which it had no control when a student transfers from another school."

YAF adopted a list of recommendations including "increased black enrollment through intensified recruiting, improved counseling and more readily available financial aid, dropping high school ratings and using an across the boards class rating as the standard for admission to the University."

The YAF Board included in their recommendations the withdrawal of rule W-11, expanding student representation on the University Senate to one third, determination of visitation rules by the residents of a living area, and giving the women the same rights as men with regard to off campus living.

YAF suggested that "the rules governing recruitment by non-student organizations shall be uniform. What applies to the military shall apply to the Peace Corps, VISTA, and all other government and non-government recruiters."

"We oppose the abolition of academic credits for the Reserve Officer Training Corps."

YAF also objected to the censoring of student publications. According to Robert Emerson, vice president of YAF, the right to publish ones own ideas is a basic freedom of the University and should be defended.

'Right' Way

"The improvement of the team lies in the fact that all three squads were intact and experienced before the season began," Wright said. "Other factors are that for once there are a good number of backup men available for each event and also that the foil squad is extremely improved over last year."

Despite all the glories the team can claim, the toughest road remains. The Lions meet Navy at home this Saturday and Rutgers a week later. Last year the Middies came close to shutting Rutgers out. 25-2, and the team never did get back up for the Knights, who beat them 18-9. Wright is cautious but optimistic toward the future.

"Navy has to be one of the nation's best and they're capable of killing us again," Wright said. "I'm just hoping for the best. Whatever happens, though, we're not going to let it get us down for Rutgers because that's the team we're looking for a little revenge from."

With the guarantee of a good season under their belts, the fencers are now looking forward to competing in a number of the post-season tournaments. These include the North Atlantic Intercollegiate Championship which uses two men from each event, the easterns, which take three men, and the nationals, with only one man in each event. Wright thinks that both he and the team personally could do well in the tournaments and he is hoping for the chance.

"I've been personally frustrated the last three years because I was always one man behind the number needed for the particular tournament we entered," he said. "I kept just missing out and so this year I'm hoping to go all the way in my last chance."

All the way, or not, Rick Wright has already gone far in Penn State fencing. Or rather, Penn State fencing has gone far with Rick Wright.

Military Ball Tickets To Be Sold Next Week

Tickets for the Military Ball, to be held in Rec Hall April 12, will be sold beginning Wednesday at the HUB desk and in Wagner. Cost is $6.50 per couple.

The Military Ball is the only formal event still held on campus. Ken Pidgeon, Military Ball public relations chairman said. This year's ball is open to all students whether they are enrolled in ROTC or not.

The Vogues will perform a one hour show at the ball, Pidgeon said. The 1969 Military Ball Queen will be announced after the Vogues' performance. Applications are available for the Military Ball Queen Contest at the HUB desk or Wagner, and must be filed by tomorrow.

Any University coed is eligible, but must have a military escort. The Military Ball committee will provide an escort when necessary.

Final judges for the Queen Contest include Donald Ford, dean of the College of Human Development, Laurence Lattman, professor of geomorphology, coach Joe Paterno and their wives.

The final judging will be held on April 8, and the queen will be chosen from the six finalists.

Rec Hall was chosen the site of this year's ball so that a larger attendance would be possible. This will also provide more room for tables and chairs, improved acoustics and additional parking facilities.
