Thieu Opposes NFL Role in Peace Talks

SAIGON — President Nguyen Van Thieu was reported yesterday to have refused to yield in his opposition to letting the Viet Cong's National Liberation Front have a separate role in peace talks.

This would set back prospects for an early breakthrough in U.S. efforts to get the preliminary peace talks in Paris moving forward.

South Vietnamese sources who have access to official information said U.S. Ambassador Ellsworth Bunker has accepted Thieu's position as final and has told Washington that further efforts to persuade the president to change his mind are hopeless, at least for the present.

The U.S. mission declined to comment on this report. The informants said Thieu was unbending on the subject of letting the front take part in peace negotiations. He met yesterday with Bunker for nearly two hours. It was their seventh meeting in the past 10 days.

South Vietnam To Release Prisoners

SAIGON — In what has generally been regarded as a peace gesture, the South Vietnamese government plans to release before the end of October 140 prisoners of war. The first government announcement said all these were Viet Cong, but a government spokesman reported yesterday that 40 of them are North Vietnamese soldiers. An official source said many of the 40 are disabled. Small groups of North Vietnamese prisoners have been freed before.

While negotiations and talk of possible peace moves continued, the war in Vietnam also went on, mostly in the air.

The U.S. Command said improved weather Thursday permitted 12 missions against the southern panhandle of North Vietnam and said "the enemy's supply system was hit hard as the pilots bombed fuel stores, warehouses and bunker complexes."

The Nation

Clifford Says U.S. Leads in Arms Race

WASHINGTON — Secretary of Defense Clark M. Clifford declared yesterday the United States holds substantial military superiority over the Soviet Union even though his figures showed the strategic lead has dwindled.

Clifford said he wasn't trying to pick a political fight but he nevertheless tossed out new data on missiles, bombers and submarines which obviously were meant to challenge remarks by former Vice President Richard M. Nixon.

The Republican presidential candidate had accused the Democrats of leaving the nation with a "gravely serious security gap" which should be replaced by clear-cut superiority under a new administration.

"I was comforted when I came into the department to find the extent of the superiority which we had over the Soviets," Clifford responded at a Pentagon news conference. "I have continued in that direction."

Candidates Campaign Throughout Nation

LOS ANGELES — Hubert H. Humphrey accused Richard M. Nixon yesterday of "playing politics with our national security." He denied his Republican opponent's statement that Democratic administrations permitted a "security gap" between U.S. and Soviet military power.

"In an effort to catch votes he is playing politics with our national security, undermining the confidence of our allies, encouraging a recklessness among our enemies and undermining our long and patient efforts to bring a rational end to the madness of the strategic arms race," said Humphrey.

He made the statement in reply to a Nixon radio broadcast Thursday night which pledged to close a "serious security gap" caused by misjudgment of Soviet intentions by the Kennedy and Johnson administrations.

NEW YORK — Republican presidential nominee Richard M. Nixon said yesterday he has learned that President Johnson is "driving very hard" for agreement on a Vietnam bombing halt, and possibly a cease-fire in the immediate future.

Nixon issued a statement reporting he has been advised of a flurry of White House meetings in the last 36 hours dealing with the effort to move toward peace in Southeast Asia.

From that starting point, he moved on to report—and deny—what he called rumors and speculation that "this spurt of activity is a cynical, last-minute attempt by Johnson to salvage the candidacy" of Vice President Hubert H. Humphrey, the Democratic presidential nominee.

"This I do not believe," Nixon said. He said Johnson has made it clear "he will not play politics" with this war.

TRENTON, N.J. — George C. Wallace concentrated his presidential efforts in industrial communities in New Jersey and Pennsylvania yesterday, and at his first stop here he found a predominantly friendly audience but as always, the hecklers too.

A group of several hundred young protesters made it difficult for many in the crowd of 4,000 in the Trenton Armory to hear the third party candidate.

When the pro-Wallace part of the audience did cut loose with cheers, however, the hecklers themselves were drowned out.

Many of the shouting, foot-stomping demonstrators were from Trenton High School, which in recent months has encountered racial tensions and fist fights between Negro and white students. The hecklers in the armory crowd were about evenly divided between whites and Negroes.

Priests Ask for Archbishop's Resignation

SAN ANTONIO, Tex. — A high-ranking Roman Catholic priest, saying he could no longer endure conditions in the giant San Antonio Archdiocese, announced yesterday he has resigned as a part of his and 50 other priests' demand that their archbishop give up his post.

The Rev. John Paul Klein, 29, vice chancellor of the archdiocese, said a major reason he decided to resign was the "pyramid structure of church authority which has little hope of substantial reform."

The priest submitted his resignation Thursday—the day he and 50 other priests announced they have asked Pope Paul VI for the resignation of Archbishop Robert E. Lucey. The archbishop will be 78 in March and his age was cited as one of several reasons for asking him to step down as spiritual leader of a half million Roman Catholics. There are 448 priests under Archbishop Lucey.

Clark and Schweiker Address NAACP

ERIE — U.S. Sen. Joseph Clark and U.S. Rep. Richard Schweiker addressed yesterday that black and white racism should be stopped.

Answering questions before the state convention of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, the two candidates for the U.S. Senate were asked how they stood on "white racism."

There is too much of it, answered Clark, and he pointed to the third party presidential candidacy of George Wallace as proof. He said he had spent his entire political life against white bigotry.

Students Heckle Wallace

THIRD PARTY Presidential candidate George C. Wallace as he spoke to approximately 5,000 supporters, students and hecklers at the Hershey Sports Arena last night. Also at the Arena was Jon Rich, Penn State's Presidential candidate who, along with 200 other students, made the 100 mile trip to see Wallace.

About 200 Penn State students, including "Presidential candidate" Jonathan Rich, went to Hershey yesterday to "cheer" for George Wallace in the Sports Arena.

Using tactics adopted twice before, they joined about 400 other college and high school students in interrupting his speech "every minute or so" with prolonged cheering.

A "Jon Rich for President" banner was prominently displayed in the forefront of the group, after being smuggled in under one student's coat.

When the high school and college students disrupted his speech, Wallace told them, "When my Attorney General gets into office, your kind of people will be dealt with by the legal authorities."

The program started with country and western music. Wallace entered surrounded by local union officials and bodyguards.

After introducing the officials he began a prepared speech. "Happy to see you all here...I expect to do well in Pennsylvania. I expect 34 percent of the vote and to carry the electoral college," and the students began to cheer.

"We love you George, George, you're beautiful... George, my brother..."

"Thank you, thank you..." Wallace, unaware for the moment that the cheers were jeers, paused for acknowledgement.

Later he used his customary tactics to counter the heckling — raising the volume of the amplification system and throwing insults back.

"You're giving me a million votes every time you demonstrate...Get a haircut!" he said, pulling at his hair with a mocking gesture. "Haircut, Haircut, Haircut!" the students responded.

At one point, several black students from Cedar Cliff High School removed their white undershirts and pulled them over their heads to simulate hood-wearing Ku Klux Klan members, then raised their black-gloved fist to signify black unity.

At least two eggs were thrown into the section containing the students, apparently aimed at the blacks. Robert Smith, a WDFM announcer was struck in the back with a splattering egg. State Police lining the arena floor immediately searched a group of Wallace supporters who were leaning on the railing above the bleachers.

At several points the students roared a "Sieg Heil!" Wallace continued unruffled, raising the volume until the distractions were drowned out.

Wallace successfully drowned out the clapping, at one point throwing kisses to the hecklers. He said, "You'd better have your day now, because after Nov. 5 you're through."

About 30 Wallace Girls stood at the side of the stage, cheering in unison. State troopers circulated through the audience and stood at the doors.

One stopped Al Dunning (7th speech-Yardley) and, pointing to his camera, asked, "What's that?"

"It's a camera with a telephoto lens," the astonished Dunning said. The guard seized it and peered in suspiciously, "as if to make sure it wasn't a shotgun in disguise," said Dunning.

Several Penn State students who were cheering Wallace in earnest told the hecklers after the speech that they were "a disgrace to Penn State."

Rich (Jon Gingrich) said "I think we accomplished more by going to Hershey and being disruptive than by staying home and remaining silent. Wallace's candidacy must be viewed in the proper light. His refusal to deal with racial strife in the country should be made known to everyone in Pennsylvania and the United States."

Wallace charged that some of the students who disrupt his presidential campaign rallies are draft dodgers "who use federal money to go to school and who in some instances fly the Viet Cong flag."

Except for the several hundred students, most of the estimated 5,000 onlookers gave Wallace a warm reception. Most cheered wildly when Wallace criticized the demonstrators, and afterwards, many said they expected a Wallace victory on Nov. 5.

"This country needs a change," a young woman from Hershey said. "And those kids need to be taught some manners."

'Probe' To Offer Courses in North

By DIANE LEWIS
Collegian Staff Writer

"Probe," the North Halls experimental program will offer experimental courses, music and cultural events.

Terry Jablonski, chairman of the committee working out the program's format, said the subtitle of the project is "perplexities rendered obvious by education."

Working on the basis of a "free university," Probe committeemen are lining up features for this term. Morris Shepard, assistant professor of human development, opened the project Wednesday night with a forum on racism.

Other activities scheduled for this term, according to Miss Jablonski, are a student panel on activism and student power, composed of two representatives of Students for a Democratic Society, two from Undergraduate Student Government and two from Young Americans for Freedom (Nov. 6); a program by the University Readers (Nov. 13); and a discussion on lowering the voting age to 18 in Pennsylvania.

Play Preview Planned

A preview of "Once Upon A Mattress" by the University Thespians and a demonstration of electronic music by Steve Gorn, graduate student in music, are also tentatively planned, Miss Jablonski said.

She said courses are being planned for Winter Term and registration for these sources will probably be held Nov. 20. As an experimental college for North Halls, the classes will be open first to North Halls residents.

Scheduled courses include a mock Senate composed of a group of 100 students who will operate as the U.S. Senate does. Credit will be given for the course. John Montone of the Department of Human Development and instructor of this course termed it "operational learning."

Other courses to be offered are interpretive Shakespeare, taught by J. A. Wigley, associate professor of speech; student involvement seminars led by John Romano, North Halls area co-ordinator; interpersonal communications, taught by Denis Berkson, graduate assistant in speech; three discussions, "Theology of Politics," "Mysticism" and "The Parables of Jesus," taught by Dale Winter, religious affairs co-ordinator, and a theatre arts course, "2001: A Space Odyssey," taught by Stephen Schlow of the theatre arts department. Miss Jablonski said they hope to incorporate an art course, a science course and more theatre arts courses in the program.

She said she expected a lot of student interest, "drawing on my experience working with Creation (the East Halls educational program of last year), seeing 500 students go out for the programs."

"I'm optimistic, especially about the experimental college," she said.

Joe Manfred, president of North Halls Council, emphasized that Probe is open to new ideas. Faculty members interested in teaching their own courses are invited to contact Miss Jablonski, Romano or Manfred.

"We're probably missing the interests of a lot of the students," Miss Jablonski said, "but they don't approach us, we can't know."

Spring Forward, Fall Back

Remember last Spring when you lost an hour of sleep. Well, Sunday morning you can sleep-in an extra hour. Eastern Standard Time goes into effect at 2:00 a.m. Sunday morning — don't forget to set your clocks back one hour.

Panhel To Hold 'Day'

The Panhellenic Council will sponsor Panhel Sorority Day at 1 p.m. Sunday in the Pollock Union Building. All girls who intend to rush sorority this winter must register at this time and must pay a $1 registration fee.

In order to rush a girl must have a 2.0 all-University average and be of second term or above standing.

Panhel will include in the program an informal discussion with sorority women on the Greek system and on specific aspects of sorority life.

Justice Douglas Says Army Not Above Law

WASHINGTON (AP) — In acridly angry words, Justice William O. Douglas accused the U. S. Solicitor General and the Army yesterday of spiriting a group of Kentucky soldiers to Vietnam before the Supreme Court could consider their plea challenging their transfer.

"No one — not even the Department of Justice nor the military — is above the law," said Douglas as he lashed at the Army and at Solicitor General Erwin N. Griswold.

His statement was released by the court at the end of a closed conference on several appeals on various subjects.

The case that aroused Douglas was that of 105 Kentucky National Guardsmen. They had asked him earlier this week to block their shipment to Vietnam on grounds they are "state militia" who may be mobilized only to fight in a declared war.

They were scheduled to leave for Vietnam yesterday after their lawyer had told the court last week. However, Douglas said, they were moved to Vietnam on Thursday, so that they would be on their way to war before the court could consider their case at its regular conference yesterday.

"This hurried calculated change in military plans has deprived petitioners (the Guardsmen) of the full hearing to which they are entitled," Douglas said.

Douglas in the past has criticized his colleagues for refusing to pass on the legality of the undeclared war in Vietnam and on a variety of constitutional challenges raised by men sent to fight and by others who protest, resist induction and are jailed.

An Existential Analysis of Student Riot

New Movements Emerging

By BILL FREELAND
Collegian Press Service

NEW YORK — From the riots of Berkeley in July, to the confrontation at Chicago in August, to campus protests as they have unfolded this fall — the old definitions of "correct political struggle" are under attack, and new forms are beginning to emerge.

The character of the challenge is slowly taking shape: the content of the issues raised is more inconsequential to the action taken; the deference to an established leadership is all but forgotten and any sense of the total political effect of an act is very nearly irrelevant.

A mood is spreading in the wake of these shifts. The new style activists gladly leave to the older "political types" the questions of ideology. Rhetoric, so revered in the past, serves young militants of today as little more than a pretext for greater belligerence.

Now Ready To Move

The students involved this year want action and they are ready to move whether they have a clearly defined "analysis of racism and imperialism" in their back pockets or not. The act of defiance alone is creating its own rationale. The "Movement" is becoming less and less the medium. It is perhaps the most important clash of sensibilities within the youth Left since Negroes declared for black power and white radicals began redefining the doctrine of non-violence.

The crucial case in point was the Democratic National Convention. That confrontation was for many the climactic moment in a whole series of events stretching from the 1963 death of Jack Kennedy past the dissolution of the Great Society, into an increasingly savage war, concluding with one or two exquisitely placed assassinations and the automated nominations of Nixon and Humphrey for President.

Distilled within this short, traumatic half-decade are sources of hostility and frustration powerful enough to infect a whole generation. It is no longer necessary to join a protest movement to confront these realities. The patent absurdities, the unending violence have become as predictable as the six o'clock news.

Shattered, in all of this, has been the sense of an orderly progression of political consciousness. The anti-racism-imperialism movement (which had replaced the anti-war movement), which had replaced the civil rights movement), appears itself threatened by pure chaos.

While each movement served for its time, one sensed through them all that they were provincial in scope. Oddly, they touched only a small part of what still troubles the great mass of Americans. Other, more fundamental questions remained — more deeply felt needs to which no voice in our national life has yet spoken.

The American environment, for too many people, simply does not permit a satisfactory way of living. But if these conflicts must remain unresolved, for many young people at least, they will not go unexpressed.

Thus, in 1968, for thousands of kids from high schools and colleges all over the country, the Democratic Party became the object, the convention became the time and the Conrad Hilton became the place. There for one, brief, incredible moment, everything was out in the open, and America glimpsed — for perhaps the first time — just how deeply the divisions really run.

Somewhere, not very long ago, a turning point of sorts was passed. One senses within the student movement a kind of break with the past. One sees the word "student" becoming too restrictive; the indictment, a gainst American society, once the property of a desperate, suspicious minority, has been joined in by a new host both on and off the campus which defies simple classification.

Already they are making their presence felt, but in ways that don't always fit traditional models for political action.

Last week, for example, New York University students mobilized militant backing over an issue many older radicals condemn as passe — reinstatement of a fired professor. But if the issue was outdated, the tactics certainly were not. Students took over two campus buildings, bombed two dorms and disrupted the university's telephone system as an expression of their support. Campus politicos moved in to broaden the issues, but almost before they could call a rally for that purpose, most of the protesters had returned quietly to their regular student roles.

These new activists, many of whom date their changed perspective as recently as, for example, Time's cover story on Columbia, seem to be looking for more personal, more immediate forms of involvement without a regard for correctness of strategy and ideology.

These new revolutionary recruits, of course, may just be politically naive — as many older radicals contend. On the other hand, it could be they no longer need the remote Great Issues, so important to the movement until now, to motivate them to action,

That they feel the need to act can be justification enough.

That certainly was the rationale during this summer's riots in Berkeley. Despite the constant flow of rhetoric from the "leadership," it was the continuing possibility of confrontation with the police that brought people into the streets each night. "The streets belong to the people," was the cry. The appeal was uncomplicated and direct — perhaps even primitive — but it moved people to action. After that level of involvement, explanations about its political significance became merely boring.

In this shifting mood, demand for the development of a unified revolutionary movement is more and more conflicting with the way younger "revolutionaries" individually want to live. They need to find a combination of life, style and politics — in an atmosphere where neither impulse implies a contradiction of the goals of the other.

In the process the movement seems headed into some kind of clash between "generations." Already older radicals express suspicion over "these Joe-College-Come-Lately radicals" — many of whom, they are quick to point out, were equally committed to Gene McCarthy just two months ago.

The neophytes, on the other hand, are just as quick to criticize their detractors for acting like members of "some old veterans group."

Neither description is accurate, but of course that has never been the point. The fact is that what started out as a small campus movement is very quickly being transformed into a sensibility with ties to aspirations of a whole generation.

A Word of Praise

This Winter and Spring Terms, the College of the Liberal Arts will offer at least five new courses dealing with African and Afro-American culture and the contribution of the black man to American culture. Information on black culture will also be infused into several other general courses, including English 1, 2 and 3, thus assuring that nearly every student attending the University will be made aware of the tremendous but heretofore ignored contribution of the black man to our society.

We assume that the sudden profusion of courses on black culture is partly due to pressure on the College of the Liberal Arts from Vice-President for Resident Instruction Paul M. Althouse and Vice President for Student Affairs Charles L. Lewis. Althouse and Lewis have been negotiating with members of the Douglas Association since last spring, when about 100 members of the black student organization confronted him with twelve demands for curriculum and admissions reform.

Members of the Douglas Association and the Administration have also been consulting individually with members of various departments, and the amount of cooperation they apparently received is gratifying. Courses on different aspects of black culture will be offered by the sociology, history, religion, political science and English departments. The experimental Liberal Arts 498 series will offer two courses this winter, one on Afro-American Literature in the 20th Century and one called The Negro in the American Experience.

Lewis, Althouse and the various department heads and professors who cooperated in the effort to institute these courses should all be congratulated.

But there seems to be one important personage missing from the list of those to be commended — University President Eric A. Walker.

Since last spring's confrontation, Walker has maintained a mysterious and irritating silence on the entire issue of the role of the black student at the University. He has had ample opportunity to make known his opinions, but has chosen to remain silent (except for one article in the little-read Alumni News). Not once during his convocation speeches did he mention the struggle of the blacks for proper representation at Penn State. He chose instead to speak on "law and order," which may be interpreted as an indirect warning to the black students to avoid militancy.

He had a third opportunity to speak his mind on the issue at the most recent meeting of the Faculty Senate, but chose instead to confine his remarks to the budget.

To our knowledge, he has not taken part in any of the negotiations between the Douglas Association and Lewis and Althouse and has not shown any interest in doing so.

Walker is supposed to be the leader of this University, to make clear to the people of the state and nation the interest and policies of the University's Administration.

The problem of black representation at the University is perhaps the most important and potentially disruptive issue which has faced this University in many years, and we are sure that the students would be interested in Walker's opinions.

"... and neither the Pied Piper nor the children were ever heard from again."

Don't Condemn Apathy

TO THE EDITOR: For quite sometime we have read far too many articles condemning and castigating the "apathetic student" from all sides both student and faculty alike. But neither of the judgment-passers has offered any possible solution. Unfortunately these students do not need anymore anti-apathy literature.

Not until the "apathetic student" faces the realization and the truths of life can he ever hope to liberate himself from the habitual and forced act of "role playing". The student must seek himself through a personal involvement with life.

We must no longer condemn him; he is human, which is something many of us have forgotten; rather we must help him to find himself and be himself.

Until then your anti-apathy letters will be a waste of time and space. We don't need destructivism, but we do need constructive ideas and attitudes.

Look at the Statistics

TO THE EDITOR: In recent years there has been a tremendous increase in literature concerning the extent and nature of poverty in the United States. The main speaker on this issue was John Kenneth Galbraith whose main ideas were 1) reduction of poverty had slowed, and 2) there are 40 to 50 million impoverished. He offered no evidence for his statements, evidently feeling one should be sufficiently impressed with his Harvard credentials and thus take his thesis on faith.

The facts are that in 1947, 28.9 percent of U.S. families fell below the $3,000 poverty line. In 1966 the figure was 14 percent. This is no "slow up" in poverty reduction and includes 29 million, not 40 or 50 million. This figure is too high but percentage wise it is the smallest number to be so classified in any country at any time. But this concerns income, what of consumption statistics?

In 1930, 7 percent of U.S. families owned electric refrigerators, by 1960 it was 99 percent. Do millions lack equipment to cook needed food? Apparently not, for 99 percent of our families own automatic cooking equipment. Are the poor out of food, clothing, and entertainment? Unlikely, since over 95 percent own T.V. In 1966, 87.5 percent of poverty families owned cars. A telephone is not something you can "eat" or wear, yet in families with incomes under $500 a year, and that's about as poor as you can get, 60 percent had telephones. Bureau of the Census statistics indicate the poor under 25 years of age bought more in one year than well-off Europeans buy in several. It appears the poor aren't as impoverished as has been said. But what of the Negro who is equated with poverty? Is his plight hopeless?

In 1947, non-white median income was $1,614, now it is $4,628. From 1960 to 1966 Negroes made more white collar progress than whites with professional, technical, and managerial advances of 13 percent to 11 percent for whites. Negro sales employment rose 48 percent while it was ten percent for whites. In 1950 only 2 percent of Negroes were "middle class"; in 1965 the figure was over 33 percent. These facts should generate hope, not despair. All wrongs aren't corrected immediately, but there has been good progress. Many have recognized this, and are responding with constructive self-help efforts, indicating a better future for our country's poor. Hopefully others will do the same.

Why Did Gregory Do It?

TO THE EDITOR: Last Saturday's visit by Presidential candidate, Dick Gregory, was both entertaining and informative. Gregory made some extremely valid and honest points about the "race problem" politics and what he termed as "the corrupt power system."

As dedicated as he may be, as concerned with the future as he is, Gregory still failed to propose any concrete steps to alleviate America's ills. He did propose some suggestions that were obviously impractical such as nation-wide boycotts.

My criticism of Gregory's performance does not lie in his impractical suggestions, however. It lies in his willingness to pull his campaign from the political box to the nightclub floor.

Gregory's humor was too often vulgar. At times, he debased the worthwhile ideas he has by using epithets and slogans that were plainly in bad taste. Gregory's statement that the "only difference between Humphrey and LBJ is that Humphrey's old lady is uglier" is an example.

Why does Gregory, who is running in opposition to Wallace, Nixon and Humphrey instead of against them, have to join the political club by using the tactic of name calling. It only debases him and what he stands for.

When using his wit to expose the absurdities of everyday life, Gregory is superb. When bitter irony becomes Gregory's tactic he is masterful. He bludgeons the hypocritical, the perverse, the corrupt. Why does he have to debase himself in the process?

What Is Artful Endeavor?

TO THE EDITOR: Bravo for G. C. Hines' letter (Oct. 23). It is about time that someone try to set the record straight as to what constitutes an artful endeavor and what, on the other hand, is the "critic's choice" to appease an audience afflicted with extreme hauteur — spoon-fed and apathetic. Though "America Hurrah" may not have been severely censored elsewhere (and perhaps because it hasn't), the words of Jean Ohman's narrative "Paper Doll People" seem particularly applicable:

"How do you build a tomorrow on such a thin threatened today?"

Dear God, It's Sunday

TO THE EDITOR: As all Penn State students, I find myself eagerly anticipating TGIF Day and the accompanying release from academic tensions. However, as an East Halls resident, I have a great dread of DGIS Day (Dear God!! It's Sunday!!!). Another Sunday afternoon, complete with a Parking-Lot-80 gymkana.

This Sunday, as with most others, I was awakened by the medley of squealing tires, whining brakes, and screeching gears. Not only that, but the entire afternoon, while trying to make sense out of one of my textbooks, I was serenaded by Porsches, M.G.'s, and the announcer's booming voice. I couldn't even escape by going to the FUB library, because the noise could still be heard there.

Is there any reason why from 10 to 7 on Sunday East Halls residents must be subjected to the thrills and excitement of the weekly gymkana? Since Sunday is the only day we don't have classes, some people prefer to sleep in, study, or relax all day. But how does one go about sleeping, studying, or relaxing with car tires and motors screeching and squealing for nine hours.

This comes complete with the announcer's voice (which must carry all the way to Bellefonte) telling the exact times and results of each lap. Since Penn State is an academic center, I think that a little peace and quiet would do the students a lot more good than listening to screeches for nine hours.

If some people need the thrills of a gymkana, why can't the parking lot of a shopping center be used, or at least some place away from campus so students can study or sleep? Make Sundays a Day of Rest again.

If you're tired of using two or more separate solutions to take care of your contact lenses, we have the solution. It's Lensine the all-purpose lens solution for complete contact lens care—preparing, cleaning, and soaking. Just a drop or two of Lensine before you insert your contacts coats and lubricates the lens surface making it smoother and non-irritating. Cleaning your contacts with Lensine retards the buildup of foreign deposits on the lenses. Lensine is sterile, self-sanitizing, and antiseptic making it ideal for storage of your lenses between wearing periods. And you get a removable storage case on the bottom of every bottle, a

Lensine exclusive for proper lens hygiene. It has been demonstrated that improper storage between wearings may result in the growth of bacteria on the lenses. This is a sure cause of eye irritation and could seriously endanger vision.

Bacteria cannot grow in Lensine. Caring for contact lenses can be as convenient as wearing them with Lensine, from the Murine Company, Inc.

The Vacation's Over

Eagles Challenge Lions

By DON McKEE
Assistant Sports Editor

Before the current football season started a lot of cynical observers were claiming that Penn State had two weeks off in the middle of the season. One following UCLA when no game was scheduled—and one the following week when the Lions played Boston College.

That kind of thinking has suddenly evaporated as Boston College has developed into a respectable team. The Eagles won their first three games before losing at Tulane last week.

The surprising Eagles are led by two guys with names right out of the national press — Harris and Gallup. No, they aren't related to the much attention as the "poll partners," which often works to Boston College's advantage. While defenders have double and triple teamed Gallup, Kives has caught nine passes for 140 yards. The pair will give Mike Smith and Neal Smith something to worry about today.

... poll partner

The air attack isn't the only thing the Lions have to worry about. Dan Radakovich, a Penn State coach, scouted the Eagles and came away with an entirely different impression.

"The thing that impressed me most about BC was its outstanding backs, both offensively and defensively," Radakovich said. "They have just average size, but they're awfully quick, and there's lots of depth."

The Eagles have three men averaging almost five yards a carry each, hardly statistics to be overlooked.

Dave Bennett leads the rushers with an eye-opening 6.1

yard average. The 6-1, 186-pounder has carried 79 times for 484 yards and has also caught passes for 106 more yards. It all adds up to six touchdowns and a rough day for State defenders.

Teaming with Bennett to torment opponents are halfbacks Ron Catone and Fred Willis, each averaging close to five yards a carry.

The man who has accomplished this football resurgence in New England is no stranger to Penn State. Joe Yukica, now in his first year at Boston College, was a star for Rip Engle's Nittany Lions in the early 50's. His six-man staff includes four Pennsylvanians and one, Bill Bowes, who was the captain of Engle's 1964 team which won the Lambert Trophy.

That makes it sort of an Old Home Week for all concerned, since Joe Paterno learned his football in New England. Paterno's been giving it back to New England too. Since taking over from Engle two years ago, his teams have trounced NEWTON LOWER FALLS, MASS. — Foggy, drizzly, cool weather greeted the Penn State football team when it arrived at Boston last night. As the United charter jet touched down at Logan International Airport at about 7:45.

The jetliner was scheduled to leave Olmstead Airport, in Harrisburg, at 6 p.m., but the buses were detained outside the city during the dinner rush hour. Thus the takeoff was 45 minutes late.

After a rather turbulent flight, the players boarded two MTA buses and arrived at the Holiday Inn, about a half hour from Boston, at 8:30 p.m.

Fair and cool weather is predicted for this afternoon's Lion-Boston College game, with temperatures expected in the mid 50's. The wind, which could reach gusts of 25 miles per hour, at times, may be a factor. However, rain isn't likely.

Don Abbey, 6-3, 236 pound Lion fullback who lives in nearby South Hadley, Mass., said as he arrived, "Rain? Are you kidding? This is God's country." — By Ron Kolb ed BC twice. Last year the Lions ran over the Eagles, 50-28, for one of their easiest wins of the season.

The game a year ago was over before the fans got settled into their seats. A pair of sophomore running backs, Don Abbey and Charlie Pittman, took charge from the opening gun. The Lions jumped out to a 28-0 lead in the first quarter and held a 43-8 advantage at halftime.

The two week layoff since UCLA has hurt the Lion's timing, but Paterno thinks it may have also been a blessing.

"With the exception of Bobby Campbell," Paterno said, "we have everyone back at full strength." The long injury list, which at one time included defensive ends Frank Spaziani, Lincoln Lippincott and George Kulka, fullback Abbey and Campbell, has been reduced to one during the rest.

Even Campbell, recovering from a severe shoulder separation may handle the punting chores today.

When the Lions collide with BC at 1:30 today, they will know that their short vacation has ended. The pollsters have been checking up on this one for weeks and the outcome may depend a lot on their actions.

Hope nobody thinks they have the week off.

Harriers at Georgetown; Cite Depth

Penn State's cross country team embarks on its first road trip of the season, visiting the team which is probably the best on the schedule, Georgetown.

The Lions currently hold a 3-1 record, with only a loss to powerful Villanova marring the season. A measure of Georgetown's strength is that the Hoyas are the only team to have beaten Villanova this season.

The Lions are led by Steve Gentry, Mike Schurko, Al Sheaffer, Ray Smith, Jeff Deardorff and hope to beat the Hoyas on depth.

Booters Travel

Penn State's shuffling lineup will go into action against the Midshipmen from Annapolis in a soccer match at the Naval Academy today.

Coach Herb Schmidt has been making lineup changes this season that would even make Gene Mauch jealous. Schmidt has been trying to find the right alignment of players to produce a solid attack for the booters.

State's booters currently own a 0-4-1 log, due mainly to the team's lack of a consistent attack. To remedy this situation, Schmidt has had his players in practically every combination of positions.

The Lions came close to finding the right men at the right spots last Saturday against a strong George Washington squad. The booters emerged with a 4-4 tie, but proved they could score points against the rugged opposition provided by the Colonials.

In spite of the improvement last week, Schmidt expects to do some personnel juggling in today's match with Navy. Navy poses a strong and aggressive attack for the State and Coach Schmidt will again be trying to find the right men for the job.

Both Hockey Teams Lose

The Penn State women's field hockey team suffered its second loss of the season Thursday, when Lock Haven topped the Lady Lions, 5-1. Maya Spies scored Penn State's lone goal early in the first half.

Lock Haven also won the junior varsity contest, 6-1. Lynn Meter was the only Penn State scorer.

The field hockey team plays Dickinson College this Tuesday, at home.

Engineering and Science at IBM

"The interdisciplinary environment keeps you technologically hot."

"Working in data processing today pretty much means you work in a broad spectrum of technologies," says Nick Donofrio.

An Associate Engineer at IBM, Nick is a 1967 graduate in Electrical Engineering. He's using his technical background to design circuits for computer memory systems.

"Circuit design used to be a narrow job," he says. "Today it can take you into the front yard of half a dozen different fields. In my job, for example, I work with systems design engineers, chemists, physicists, metallurgists, and programmers."

Nick describes a hypothetical case history: "A memory systems man comes to me with memory circuit requirements. Before I can start designing the circuit, I go to see a physicist. He helps me select an appropriate technology for the monolithic circuit."

"As the design develops, I work with a test group and also check back with the systems and semiconductor people to make sure I'm on the right track."

Keeping up

The interdisciplinary environment at IBM helps you keep up to date technologically. As Nick puts it, "You're constantly exposed to what's happening in other fields."

IBM needs technical graduates to work in research, design and development, manufacturing, product test, field engineering, and space and defense projects. We also need technical people in programming and marketing.

Taxes Explained

By ANTON NISS
Collegian Staff Writer

Students need more information on taxes levied by the local school district, according to the tax office. Paul D. Bender, tax collector for the State College Area School District, says there is a "failure to communicate" concerning their responsibilities.

"Students over 21 years old are liable to the taxing policies of the local school district as they are established by the district," said Bender. "Everyone over 21 must be listed by the tax assessor of this district; and if they have legal domicile here they are subject to district tax requirements."

"Taxes frequently involving students are the occupation and per capita taxes which are levied on people over 21 who reside in the district."

Assessed for Domicile

"A person is assessed where he has established legal domicile. His legal domicile is described as that place to which, when he leaves, he has intentions of returning. Single students in dormitories and rooming houses are considered as only in temporary residence and are not assessed, in general."

"But if a married student brings his wife and family here to live he is, in many cases, considered to have established legal residence here," Bender said.

"The action to be taken by the recipient of a tax bill may be either to pay the tax or to request exoneration by way of proving legal domicile elsewhere or proving financial inability to pay."

If students have legal domicile elsewhere they must show as evidence either a paid tax receipt or a letter from their home county assessor indicating that they are on that county's current tax rolls," according to Bender.

"Any individual who feels he should not be assessed in the State College Area School District for any reason may request to be considered for exemption by completing an exemption form available at the local tax collector's office or at the office of the local school district where it is to be filed," said Bender.

The office of the local tax collector is 250 E. Beaver Ave. The office of the local school district is 131 W. Nittany Ave. The State College Area School District is comprised of State College borough and the five surrounding townships.

Bender continued, "If a person feels he has a question concerning an assessment on his occupation or the amount of an assessment, he should contact the local tax assessor. Assessments are not under the jurisdiction of the tax collector but only of the tax assessor."

The local tax assessor is Mrs. William Welch. Her office is at her home at 210 Adams Ave.

First Time Hurts

Bender said, "A main problem the tax collector faces is the fact that many who are taxed for the first time do not fully understand their responsibility in the matter or are not familiar with the ways and means of assessment."

"The taxpayers should be cautioned not to confuse the occupation and per capita taxes with the local one per cent wage tax or the flat rate $10 occupational privilege taxes."

"The one per cent wage tax is levied on the gross earnings of individuals in this area; the flat rate $10 tax is levied for the privilege of engaging in an occupation in the district, and anyone who earns in excess of $1000 during a calendar year for services performed in this district is liable to this tax," said Bender.

Theatre Sets Play Schedule

The University Theater has announced its 1968-69 production schedule and also the availability of two subscription plans.

Six major productions will be staged at the Pavilion and Playhouse Theatres. Several special events will be featured throughout the year.

With the purchase of six coupons, valid for six admissions when redeemed at the box office, the theatergoer receives a 25 per cent discount. The coupons may be used in any combination for Thursday or Friday night performances.

In addition, an optional season special is being offered this term. The patron selects a night on which he will attend regularly and receives tickets for the entire season on that night, with the same seat guaranteed. The season special was offered last summer for the first time and its popularity has led to its use again this season.

"Unfortunately, in the past some of our subscribers have waited until the last minute to decide which night they would attend. When they tried to get tickets we were sold out. Therefore, we are recommending the season special for those who want to avoid missing the popular productions," Peter Shapiro, theatre manager, said.

The fall season will open Oct. 31 at the Playhouse with Eugene O'Neill's "Ah, Wilderness!" Dealing with the coming of age of a sensitive young man, the story is set in the New England of the 20's.

Beginning Nov. 14 at the Pavilion, Moliere's farce, "The Miser," will be staged. All major productions run two weekends, with performances Thursday through Saturday evenings.

A special evening of theater will take place Nov. 4. Guest artist Max Adrian will recreate his recent Broadway role of George Bernard Shaw in "By George," based on the Irish playwright's life and writings. "By George" will be shown for one performance only in the Playhouse Theater.

New GSA Constitution Snagged

The adoption of a new constitution by the Graduate Student Association encountered a snag Thursday night, at the organization's second meeting of the term.

Representative Bob Bernstein (Sociology) raised the point that, "Under the old constitution which we are still governed by, we cannot adopt any amendment or law without a 30-day consideration period."

In other action, GSA passed recommendations on Article No. 4, election of senate representatives, so that they could be named and begin their work.

Due to the length of the meeting the recommendation governing the election of officers was not passed and the vacant offices of vice president and treasurer were not filled.

The Senate committee representatives are as follows: Research and Graduate Study—Martin Essendorf; Bob Bernstein; Academic Development—David MacKenzie; Library and other Information—Systems—Gordon Springer; Continuing Education—Jim Kashner; Resident Institution—David Yens; Faculty Affairs—Howard Cyr; Forum Committee—Fred Jones; Calvin Burgoine; University Committee—on Planning—Bob Richards.
