V.C. Turn Down Bid for Closed Talks

V.C. Turn Down Bid for Closed Talks

PARIS — The United States proposed yesterday that the Vietnam peace talks be restricted to the four principal delegates and a few advisers in a new closed-sessions attempt to break the deadlock.

Hanoi and the Viet Cong turned down the bid at the 40th session of the talks. Both sides agreed that no progress has been made in the Paris Discussions and each blamed the other for the failure.

U.S. Ambasador Henry Cabot Lodge, calling for "a new approach to break out of this sterile situation and promote serious negotiations," proposed that the four chief delegates meet next Tuesday in a restricted session accompanied by no more than three advisers each.

Lodge said there would be "no public release of the record" of what was said at restricted meetings, but "we could agree on exactly what would be said to the press after each session."

Guerrillas Attack Lebanese Fortress

BEIRUT, Lehanon — Arab guerrillas blasted the mountain fortress town of Rashaya with rockets and mortars yesterday and then tried to storm the Lebanese army stronghold but were driven back, military spoke-main said.

Army officers reported that the guerrillas charged up the rocky slopes leading to Rashaya's fortress, screaming "Allah! Allah!" and firing wildly. Most of their shots went into the air, the officers said, but the heavy shelling that preceded the attack wounded four Lebanese soldiers, three of them seriously.

Hundreds of families fled the border areas as the battle grew more savage.

The guerrillas tried also to overrun a Lebanese air force base at Klayat. Street lighting flared anew in the guerrilla-entrenched port city of Tripoli.

Cal Tech Prof Awarded Nobel Prize

STOCKHOLM — The 1969 Nobel Prize in Physics was awarded yesterday to Prof. Murray Gell-Mann of the California Institute of Technology, giving the United States two of the three Nobel prizes in science for 1969.

The Royal Swedish Academy of Science cited Gell-Mann, 40, for his "contributions and discoveries concerning the classification of elementary particles and their interactions." Reached at his Pasadena, Calit., home by telephone. Gell-Mann said, "I was sort of hoping for" the Nobel honor, then added, "but I was not really expecting it." The award carries a cash prize of $72,800.

The chemistry prize, also awarded yesterday, went to two Europeans, Prof. Derek H. R. Barton, 51, of the Imperial College of Science and Technology in London and, Prof. Emeritus Odd Hassel, 72, of the University of Oslo.

Williams told the Senate that in addition to the land the Texans received $8 million in loans from the Federal Housing Administration and nearly $500.000 in Welfare Department grants to finance the building of a nursing home and apartment at Austin, Tex.

Williams described the transaction as a land grab arranged on orders from the White House then occupied by Lyndon B. Johnson.

Government To Lead in Desegregation

WASHINGTON—President Nixon pledged yesterday he will use the government's leadership resources to overcome "problems" raised by the Supreme Court's school desegregation decision.

But neither the White House nor the Justice Department would say whether this meant government civil rights lawyers would press for vigorous enforcement and wide application of the ruling that called for an end to delay.

The NAACP Legal Defense and Educational Fund, which won the case over the government's opposition, began to move ahead on its own—while awaiting a concrete response from the government to its plea for cooperation.

Illinois Case Tests Judicial Ethics

WASHINGTON — An obscure Illinois trust case could provide the platform for the first major Supreme Court judgment on judicial ethics in more than 40 years.

While the Senate ponders the nomination of Judge Clement F. Haynsworth Jr., to join their ranks, the justices will be weighing an appeal by a wealthy Chicago woman, Mrs. Claresa F. Armstrong Brown, that brings the ethics problem to their doorstep.

The case has absolutely no connection with Haynsworth, but because of it the justices may not be able to remain aloof from the bitter light over judicial ethics much longer.

Brominski, who reserved judgment on the petition of Massachusetts' authorities to exhume the body of Mary Jo Kopechne for an autopsy, is running for re-election, Wecht noted.

Wecht said, however, the complexities of the case require much time for thought and this may be why Brominski has yet to render an opinion.

Brominski has been on the Luzerne County bench in Wilkes-Barre since 1958 and is running unoposed in the election. Voters will cast yes or no ballots to keep him in office under new rules of judicial procedure in Pennsylvania requiring a referendum.

Chavez Brings Boycott Plea to State

"What is the sense of getting another nickel of wage increase if we can't keep our health?" said Chavez, head of the United Farm Workers Organizing Committee, an AFL-CIO affiliate seeking recognition from California grape growers.

"The life expectancy of the average American is 72 years, but the average grape picker dies at 49." Chavez said.

The union organizer, on a nationwide tour to drum up support for the boycott, will join Pittsburgh supporters in picketing at the city's produce yards today.

Pupil Sit-In Causes Class Cancellation

PHILADELPHIA — Classes were canceled yesterday afternoon at West Philadelphia High school in a continuing controversy over white social studies teacher George Fishman. School board officials closed the doors after approximately 200 students sat-in near his classroom.

A school board spokesman said the sit-in was orderly, but afternoon classes were called off to avoid a possible increase in the size of the demonstration.

Earlier Thursday about 25 students attended Fishman's first class, under orders from the school board to attend classes or be marked absent. Students with three absences are

David Gottlieb, research professor in human development, called for an apology to the University community from H. Beecher Charmbury, University Trustee and State secretary

Gottlieb requested the apology as a result of statements Charmbury made in a Bellefonte Kiwanis Club speech Tuesday about the "intiltration" of Communism into "our schools, our churches and our entertainment field."

Gottlieb said he "took exception" to the sources Charmbury quoted in his speech, which said that "41 per cent of any given student body were sympathetic to radical causes."

In a letter to The Daily Collegian yesterday, Gottlieb said Charmbury did not state his source, but he said he "had a feeling Charmbury was referring to a study conducted by the Educational Testing Service." The ETS study, Gottlieb said, noted that some type of organized protest occurred in almost 40 per cent of the 859 four-year accredited institutions surveyed, not 41 per cent of any given student body. "The kind of comments that Charmbury made." Gottlieb said, "magnifies the whole generational conflict" Gottlieb asked that Charmbury either "support his allegations about

Beaver Terrace Residents Meet Management With Rebate Gripes

By MIKE GOMEZ Collegian Staff Writer

Beaver Terrace residents voiced their demands for additional rebate payments and improved living conditions in their controversial building at last night's meeting with representatives of the Federated Home and Mortgage Company held in the Beaver Terrace lobby.

Rebate payments to 10th and 11th floor residents was the issue arousing the ire of the large gathering of protesting student residents. Following much discussion on the issue, Mrs. Margot Semple, rental manager for Federated, announced that she, Jack Carr, a Federated official connected with the local Holiday Inn, and Nick Nicodemus, chief construction superintendent for Beaver Terrace would meet with Phillip Soir Federated wedget and discussed. Phillip Seig, Federated president and discuss the rebate problem.

'Vocational Employers'

Mrs. Semple said. "I feel that the tenants are my vocational employers. I will try to represent you at this meeting." She declined to mention in her statement, however, whether she would actually recommend the payment of additional rebates to 10th and 11th floor residents.

According to Rich Pearson, a leader in the aver. Terrace protest, Mrs. Semple is Beaver Terrace protest, Mrs. Semple is "caught in the middle" between the tenants and management. He said he felt she wor attempt to represent the interest of st ent

This apparent agreement was preceded by a long, sometimes heated exchange between residents and Mrs, Semple.

The rebate issue revolves around the fact that some 10th and 11th floor residents were unable to move into their apartments until Sept. 29. During the interim they were housed at the State College Holiday Inn.

Mrs. Semple expressed the opinion that Federated performed a service by housing students at the motel and by paying them the rebate that they did receive. Residents said they were "inconvenienced".

Early in her remarks, Mrs. Semple acknowledged student "discomfort" but added the owners had put out "fantastic amounts of money" to relieve the situation. She said students could have "stayed home" if they disliked their temporary housing.

Ron Suppa of the Town Independent Men's Council said, "I can't believe Federated will be willing to risk its reputation," concerning the rebate situation.

Suppa later said next year's apartment owners will be at a disadvantage because the number of apartments available will "definitely outnumber the number of students seeking off-campus housing."

Pearson said the protesting residents are still "organizing tenants". If rebates are not forthcoming it is possible that rents will be placed in escrow to await a court decision.

Apartments still unfinished upon tenant occupancy, laxity in repair work and elevator problems received much discussion at last night's meeting.

Jerry Azeff, an 11th floor resident, said, "I got a letter two weeks ahead of time stating that my apartment was ready Then when I got here I walked 11 flights of stairs and found that there was no front door on my apartment."

Another student-resident said of the condition of floors at Beaver Terrace, "If you spill a liquid on the floor it seeps not only down to the next floor but several floors down after that."

Mrs. Semple blamed slowness in repair work on "outside contractors" as she had earlier in statements to The Daily Collegian.

Student residents complained that the contractors, especially painters and electricians, could be subject to contractural "penalty clauses" should repairs proceed behind schedule. Nicodemus discounted this possibility by saying that the enforcement of such clauses was "impossible" due to legal technicalities.

Nicodemus said general construction had been slowed down by "acts of God such as weather."

Azeff replied, "I saw painters sleeping on the job; I don't see that as an 'act of God'."

Tenant Negligence Cited

Mrs. Semple tried to explain the repair issue by saying that tenants should work through the buildings "punch list" to handle complaints. She and Nicodemus also said man-repairs were made necessary due to tenant

Don Boyer of the Reliance Elevator Company said that it was "impossible for an elevator with one or two people in to fall due to the heaviness of the counterweight."

The management representatives passed out letters certifying that the Beaver Terrace elevators had been inspected and were safe. Noises originating from elevators were explained by Boyer as arising from "steel against steel contact."

According to Pearson, all floors of Beaver Terrace were represented at the meeting.

Mayor Leads March

By JEFF BECKER Collegian Staff Writer Members of the newly formed Grape Boycott Committee will be in Pittsburgh tomorrow night to attend a United Farmworkers Organizing Committee rally featuring national director Cesar Chavez. The purpose of the free rally is "to add moral support to those working for the grape boycott in this area." according to Susan Chromiak, a member of the local committee. The workers have been on strike for four years, and a national movement has been working to convince consumers not to buy California grapes. The growers have countered by using "scab labor" to take the place of the strikers. Presently there are no existing labor laws covering the rights of the migrant workers. An Emotional Outburst can often be an innocent thing. In the heat of an argument something is blurted out, immediately regretted, but the blurter's ego won't let even a calmed mind retract the statement. Damage may be done to another person, and although an apology would set things right, it may never come.

A person who never acts on his emotions would not be totally human. But part of the difficulty of being a public figure is that no human foibles can be allowed. And university pro-fessors are public figures.

Besides demanding that they be sinless, people expect public figures to be aro e suspicion. And just as importanty, they demand that they subordinate their humanity to the responsibility of their position.

FACULTY MEMBERS, especially those involved in campus politics, must be especially careful about their public behavior. Perhaps the single most public aspect is press relations.

Wells Keddie, assistant professor of labor studies, badly damaged his press relations this week when he told a reporter from this newspaper that the next time she attended a meeting of the New University Conference, she should bring a bodyguard.

More than that, he has by that action greatly harmed his image as a faculty member. Keddie, perhaps more than any other professor, had been quick to lead the student left to the barricades, whether they were set uo in the ground floor of the HUB or the Old Main lobby. This makes him all the more susceptible to criticism and it would be expected that he be extremely careful at all times.

A LEADER OF THE Movement is expected to be careful, if not for his own well-being, for the sake of the cause. In the past, Keddie has repeatedly and courageously climbed aboard a soapbox and championed the student left. Unfortunately, because he did not always choose his words well, and because he sometimes let anger munity to the sincere and non-vicious.

AN EMOTIONAL EXCLAMATION rather than sincerity direct his rhetoric, Keddie's bombasts have frequently hurt student causes.

> Cool-minded student activists would be the first to admit they don't need Keddie. They need calm, sincere faculty members who are willing and able to work with all segments of the University community, including the Administration and the press.

> Keddie's recent actions suggest that he meets none of these requirements.

HIS ORIGINAL TEMPER tantrum, which included the threat against t e female reporter which The Daily Collegian sent to cover the story, was caused by his misunderstanding of standard newspaper ethics and aractices. He told the reporter that something he said was "off the record," or not for publication. But the utterance was in an open meeting, and when the press is invited to such gatherings, all transactions are public affairs and must be reported.

It is not news to say that this newspaper has been generally sympathetic with the Movement on this campus. But politics and social theories aside, some issues are absolute.

CARDINAL AMONG THEM are honesty and the lack of malice among public figures. And while Keddie has long been the vocal kingpin of a nolitical bias that has appealed to us, his actions indicate that he is harming that cause. The student left doesn't need him. His credibility has been compromised because of his actions, and he should voluntarily withdraw from the position he placed himself in at the head of the Movement.

Nor does the academic community need Wells Keddie. A man who uses his position to browbeat a female student working as a Collegian reporter. does not help the free-interchange-of-ideas sort of education that the cause is back-

'A Real Fighter'

TO THE EDITOR: I agree with your editorial and David Gottlieb's letter (Oct. 30 Collegian) deploring H. Beecher Charmbury's intemperate speech which claimed that the Communist party was taking over schools, churches and entertainment fields.

However, I think both your writer and Prof. Gottlieb were a little too hasty in praising his work as Secretary of Mincs. The same issue carried news that the U.S. House of Representatives overwhelmingly passed a broad new coal mine health and safety bill designed to cut down on mine accidents and to eliminate lung disease caused by coal dust.

When the bill was first introduced, Secretary Charmbury said he would not enforce it in Pennsylvania if it passed, since he thought that accidents are not caused by owner negligence, but rather are due to the low level of intelligence of miners.

I hope the Secretary has by now changed his mind. The vote which authorized the bill was 389 to 4. The miners of Pennsylvania cannot afford "a real fighter" like Charmbury imposing a majority of one against mine safety in Pennsylvania.

'Artistic Abortion'

'Artistic Abortion'
TO THE EDITOR: If H. Beecher Charmbury is really concerned about the spread of the Communist menace, perhaps he should investigate the biggest threat to democracy and free enterprise on this campus.

This threat is Penn State's annual artistic abortion, La Vie. Even Charmbury recognizes the right of students to dress as they please. La Vie. on the other hand, requires a specific mode of dress, with no consideration of whether a person owns such clothing or cares to be photographed in it.

Instead of a representative sample of dashikis, turtlenecks, or what have you, most of the yearbook consists of pages of totalitarian look-alike mug shots that have as much relevance and artistic merit as a list of student numbers.

La Vie supports the free enterprise system by giving you the choice of one photographer or no photograph, hardly encouraging competition or a choice of artistic standards.

The marketing system of La Vie matches anything this side of the People's Republic of China—you pay for the book from your general deposit, then have the choice of picking 't up or letting them keep it!

If one of La Vie's purposes is to "train students in book publication", I have one question: Where, outside the realm of Happy Valley's compulsory buying system, would such a "book" survive economically?

If the comments of Wells Keddie in the Oct. 30 issue of The Daily Collegian are accurately reported, the University community should concern itself with the oral dysentery of this paragon of paranoia.

Wells Keddie says he is for equality of opportunity. Today Penn State women have achieved equal rights—Wells Keddie has threated the physical well-being of a Penn State co-ed.

Yes, we support the military. I admit it!

We believe that everyone should be supporting our boys who are working so hard over there for peace instead of undermining everything they do.

Should those two women in the Moratorium be praised for breaking the law and for being false martyrs for doing so? Is this what you're asking all University women to be like? I say that our peaceful group, trying to work in and through the system, is much more worthy of arrough the system, is much more worthy of praise.

As far as our being "mindless windowdressing based on a stereotyped idea of sex appeal," I answer—who are you to criticize us? What do you know of the people and innerworkings behind Angel Flight? We are far from sex symbols. We accept any woman who has a 2.3 all-U (we're a national, honorary sorority) and a sincere interest in serving the campus, community, and nation. On any given day you can find us in uniform, braving the weird looks and jeers, to escort high school students and parents on a tour as campus guides, visiting our adopted grandmother at a nursing home, raising money for our orphan, collecting for charities, and ushering for campus and town events.

If these things and more aren't fulfilling our role as dedicated, responsible campus women, then I don't know what is. Happiness is being an angel!

Cindy Colwell (5th-nursing-State College)

Positive Acts of Service TO THE EDITOR: Mrs. Bontempo. in her recent article in Faculty Forum, said "one campus organization received less attention than it warrants." I agree.

Angel Flight is an organization composed of young women dedicated to serving humanity throughout the University, the community, and the Nation.

of young women declared to serving inflaming throughout the University, the community, and the Nation.

Penn State Angels, with Arnold Air Society members, have adopted a Victnamese child and have supported him for over four years; have visited and entertained underprivileged and mentally and physically handicapped children in neighboring institutions; have contributed food baskets, clothing and toys to local needy families; have annually collected for UNICEF; have made many picture scrapbooks for the children's ward of the Centre County Hospital. Angels visit nursing homes to cheer the ill and oft forgotten elderly and have adopted one lady as their grandmother. In addition, they serve as Official University Guides to aid visiting marents and prospective students, as hostesses for Open House celebrations of the various Coreges within the University, and as ushers for University and community functions.

Are the women of Angel Flight functioning as moral members of our Society? Indeed they Are the women of Angel Flight functioning as moral members of our Society? Indeed they are.

The members of Angel Flight are performing positive acts of service to aid the disadvantaged and the helpless within our society. The needs they are serving are here, they are real, and they can be reached. The young ladies of Angel Flight are responding to these needs by giving of their time, their substance, with an open heart and hand. While they are performing these services through approved channels, they have never expressed nor implied any criticism to those groups who prefer to show concern by other means and actions. In concern for humanity, there are many competing claims and obligations for service. Freedomloving people will find their consciences guiding them in many different channels. Only a tyrant will demand that all must goose-step in unison. During my thirty-eight years on the University staff, and my lifteen years as Co-Advisor to Angel Flight (on the local, area and national level) it has been my privilege to know and work closely with many hundreds of our finest and most dedicated young men and women. I consider it a great honor to have been chosen as a National Honorary Angel and an henorary member of the Arnold Air Society, and I am grateful for the opportunity to so serve.

PLANT CHEMICAL ENGINEERING

Already 10th largest industry in the U.S., papermaking is exploding with new growth. And Charmin, as a producer of personal paper products only, is a pacesetter in the segment that is growing 3 times faster than the total industry!

Charmin's entire operations are alive with new methods, new ideas, new processes, new product concepts—and Charmin engineers are in the forefront of these developments. Now, as our marketing area expands beyond 45% of the U.S. population, we need more engineers capable of bold new thinking

Our rapid growth, combined with a practice of promotion from within, provides outstanding advancement opportunities. We must significantly increase our management organization in the next few years, providing opportunities at all levels in the organization. Your progress will be closely followed, since our technically trained management group is comparatively small.

Encourages 'Talk'

Collegian Staff Writer Talk, talk, talk—that's all people ever want to do. But in the College of The Liberal Arts, a committee has been formed just for that purpose: more talking between students and faculty in the College to promote better relations between the two.

the College to promote better relations between the two.

And, Philip A. Klein, professor of economics, has been selected as chairman of the committee. As Klein explained the committee is designed to not only improve student-faculty communication, but also to open lines of communication within the College housed in Sparks.

The committee's purpose is to act as a "fire department" in helping to contain crises within the College before they get out of control, Klein explained. The 12 members, ircluding four faculty members, two ex-officio faculty members and six students, will work to make the College and the University less impersonal to students, he added Students should find it easier to discuss problems that might arise with any single member or, if they wish, with the entire committee.

easier to discuss problems that might arise with any single member or, if they wish, with the enture committee.

Klein said tensions between faculty and students could be avoided not only if channels of communication were kept open, but also if students were given positions on department committees within the College. He sent a questionnaire to the heads of each department, requesting information about current involvement students have in departmental decision-making. To date, he has received 14 replies, only one of which he termed "unfavorable."

Students already on College department committees have received an enthusiastic reception from the faculty members Klein reported. "They take their responsibilities seriously and do an excellent job." he noted, adding that this is "a program to be recommended to other colleges."

Graduate students tend to be more involved in the decision-making processes than undergraduates. Klein observed. He said student opinions are invaluable in the areas of curriculum, academic policy and departmental projects, and added that voting rights should be given in some situations.

Issues such as faculty promotion and tenure decisions, Klein said, should not be determined by the students.

Klein said the views of students and faculty members on the selection of a successor to University President Eric A. Walker are "equally important." He added that it is "iterribly terribly important to both faculty and students to know that their views have been considered."

Klein noted that "some students might be trying to knock off one candidate before it was clear that he had been chosen." Articles appearing in The Daily Collegian may have given too much publicity to comments made by committee members who believed their statements would not be publicized, he explained.

Klein also spoke out on the controversy over the proposed who believed their statements would not be publicized, no explained.

Klein also spoke out on the controversy over the proposed faculty club planned for construction near the Hetzel Umon Building. He called it a "lost peoble" in a nationwide trend toward misdirected national priorities.

The situation starts in the federal government, he explained, which allows 880 billion for defense and only $20 billion for weifare. Money gradually filters down to the university level, he concluded

The club would be "a nice thing to have" he said but Klein is willing "to sell it down the river" for four or five years to concentrate on more pressing needs.

Klein added that funds for the faculty club were obtained through private donation and are earmarked for the building of the club, so that these same funds could not be used for other purposes without permission from the donors.

Regarding black study programs. Klein said such courses would be good, but for some reservations. "In the short run, yes, in the long run, no" he said of the programs explaining that a course in black histery would serve a temporary psychological purpose on a short term basis. The better plan in the long run, he said, would be to revise the original history program to include the contributions of black people.

He said the country faces a "problem of restructuring program to include the contributions of black people. He said the country faces a "problem of restructuring society to include black people, as repayment for 100 years of stupidity (on the part of wintes). If the rest of society doesn't appreciate it." Klein continued, "they deserve every bit of discomfort they get, in the long pull, however, racism doesn't work—black or white."

Klein said he supported the Oct. 15 Moratorium, saving "it did a wonderful job of bringing us together in a way Dick Nixon will never be able to." Though he did not caused his classes, he suspended usual classwork for students who attended to discuss what he called the distortion of the American economy as a result of the war.

He had hopes that no one would attend and called it "indefensible to stay home and sleep" without either going to class or attending Moratorium activities.

Klein also said the war is part of a "terrible distortion" of Prenounced Koolyahgus (accent on the ah), the actual spelling is khulyages and most students have probably seen it on posters plastered on trees lining the Mall, on buttons on students' lapels, or read about it in Collegian classified ads during the past few days.

Pollution in Food

PSU To Examine

With consumer attention riveted on the problem of food contamination, the State Department of Health has asked the University to investigate hazards in the Commonwealth's food

"Although there has been a lot of publicity recently about foot additives, salmonellosis—a bacterial type of food poisoning—may pose an even greater problem," according to Manfred Kroger, assistant professor of food science who is direction the population.

"The United States is one of the best regulated countries in the world in regard to what is put into food. There is a tremendous research effort in this area on the part of both government and individual companies."

A great deal of work needs to be done now, Kroger said, to prevent salmonellosis. The most serious cases which are reported each year represent only "the tip of the recherg." he says. Countless people become mildly ill with symptoms ranging from diarrhea and nausea to vointing. They just don't tell

Initially the food scientist and his staff will attempt to define specific potential hazards in three industries: dehydrated food processing, poultry and poultry products, and eggs and egg products.

After a study of the available technical literature and statistics on past food poisoning outbreaks. Kroger plans to chick on the safety margin built into such processes as spray drying, pasteurization and

"We'll also take a look at the human factor," he continued, "Education might help retrain the employe who's in a hurry to get home and decides not to wait until the sterilization temperature is high enough. If he can be made to realize that his actions could make a number of people very sick, he may be less hasty."

Saimonellae, Kroger explained, are very common bacteria in nature, carried by many animals and often found in barn-yards. But while a turkey may be brought into plant with the bacteria, if the plant is operating properly, the dressed fowl will be free of any trace of the organism.

"The public more or less assumes that established industries are taking the necessary precautions to climinate possible invaders of human health." Kroger noted. "Milk, for example, has long been accepted as one of the safest foods, and the dairy industry has very strict regulations indeed. But we must also deal with new industries using such new processes as dehydration by freeze-drying.

"Their engineering systems have been carefully worked out, but the microbiological aspects of the process may not be adequately known. And each year several thousand new foods pop up, many of them convenience items which can be opened, heated and caten."

Tea Ingredient Causes Cancer In Rats; But Is It Dangerous?

NEW YORK (AP) — Every cup of tea you drink contains a little bit of tannic acid, the ingredient which gives tea its strength of body

Rats have developed cancer of the liver after huge amounts of tannic acid were injected under their skin. Does that mean tea is dangerous for you to drink?

There is absolutely no evidence that any person has developed cancer from drinking tea, even a small ocean of But under a strict federal law no tannic acid can be added to human food or drink, because it has been found capable of inducing at least one form of cancer in at least one species of animal, at whatever dose, or by whatever means of administration. That same law led to ban-ning cyclamates, the artificial sweeteners, from diet drinks and other products. Some rats had gotten bladder cancer af-ter being given cyclamates at a dose 50 times higher than that regarded as safe for a human being. To ingest the same amount of cyclamate, a person would have to drink 300 bottles of cyclamate-sweetened soda pop daily.

Tea is not affected under the 11-year-old law because tannic acid is a natural ingredient of tea—It is not added artificially. And, to repeat over the centea—it is not added artificially.
And, to repeat, over the centuries tea drinking has not been linked with human cancer despite the experiments with animals in 1951 and 1959. Neither is there any evidence Nether is there any evidence to date that cyclamates have actually produced any cancers in humans. Robert H. Finch, secretary of health, education and welfare said, but "it is imperative to follow a prudent course in all matters concerning public health." ing public health.

Cyclamates and tea illustrate in part a dilemma between law and nature.

Nature doesn't change, some researchers are urging that the 11-year-old law be re-examined to make it less stringent, and also perhaps to broaden it. The law only pinpoints cancer as a hazard, and not other possible dangers in other food ad ditives.

Thus this law does not apply in the case of the taste-enhancing agent, monosodium glutamate, which has been found capable of producing brain damage in infant mice. Cigarettes are under jurisdiction of the Federal Trade Commission. mission.

The problem, scientists explain, is to make certain that food elements are completely

But two years ago the situation was far moved from the current status of the teams. he Lions had just suffered a dellating 17-15 'oss to Gary Beban and UCLA in a game that has as tough as a street fight. The Bruins won on a blocked punt that went for a touchdown, the kind of loss that can bring on a severe case of the "downs," With a record that stood at 1-2, State didn't exactly have the football world squad was a respectable opponent.

The current Eagle array owns a 2.2 record and has come off back-to-back losses to Villanova and Army Injuries, especially loss of running back Fred Willis (cracked ribs), have hurt the Eagles, who had hopes of improving on last season's 63 mark. That could prove difficult, especially since the BC-Holy Cross game was cancelled when the entire Holy Cross squad contracted infectious hepatitis

The offense that gets the weekly honor of punishing itself against State's brutal defensive umit, revolves around the talented arm of Frank "Red" Harris Last season the 6.1, 180 pound broke all BC sophomore passing records and is in a position to surpass some all time Eagle records, including those set by All-American Jack Concannon. He threw three interceptions against State, but made a lot of people sit up and take notice when the Eagles played Army. He fired 57 passes and completed 37-the most completions in a game by any quarterback in the NCAA last year.

The Eagles have a sizeable defensive line and some good performers who could give the slow-starting State offense some trouble. Defensive tackle John Fitzerald stands 6-5, tips the scales at 255 and can run a 40 yard dash in five seconds. He teams with junior Jim Millham (6-4, 230) to give BC a good pass rush. The ends are another heavy pair-Gene Ferris (6-4, 228) and Bill Perry (6-3, 220).

For the Lions, it will probably be the defense that gets the game moving. No one has seriously threatened the supremacy of State's defenders yet, although Syracuse came close until it ran out of gas. Tomorrow's contest could wind up another shutout, ala the 20-0 whipping the Lions handed West Virginia three weeks ago.

Different Return

By DAN DONOVAN

Assistant Sports Editor

When Joe Yukica steps off the plane from Boston today, he probably won't be able to help gazing around the University Park campus and thinking what a difference 19 years can make. The Boston College coach was a student at Penn State way back in the early fifties when the school was still the Pennsylvania State College.

State College wasn't much more than a few barns back then, and although some might say it still isn't much more, one must remember that even Winky's hadn't heard of the place back then.

Yukica was an offensive end on the football team during the 1950-52 seasons, and he'll find the setup a little different in 1969 than when he was an undergraduate. The white-haired gentleman named Rip Engle who used to bark orders to the Penn State team will be sitting in a private box enjoying the game as only a retired coach can.

Yukica can remember meeting the new assistant coach Engle brought with him. He was a "skinny Italian kid" not much older than the players themselves by the name of Joe Paterno.

Yukica will remember a freshman defensive tackle by the name of Roosevelt Grier who broke into the starting lineup back in 1951. After a "half decent" pro football career, Rosey is occupied as a singer, night club entertainer and he even makes a few commercials for television. A defensive end on that same team was a man called Jesse Arnelle. The versatile athlete played both football and basketball for State and now occupies an even more important position-he is a trustee for his alma mater.

One thing hasn't changed at State-winning football teams. Back in 1950-52 Penn State was just beginning the Engle Era of football with winning teams and in 1969 Penn State is riding the longest unbeaten streak in the nation.

Boston College was the first stepping stone on that long unbeaten streak. In 1967, after that frustrating 17-15 loss to Gary Beban's UCLA, State travelled to Chestnut Hill, Mass, and took their wrath out on the poor Eagles, 50-29. The Lions haven't come out on the short end of the score since then and could make it 26 consecutive times

Boston College will be the underdogs tomorrow, basically because it has a completely different football program than the Lions. BC is one of the finest Jesuit schools in the country and most of its players are pre-law students on the side.

BC is a school where the halfback who played for a Catholic school in Cleveland and is smart enough to go through law school can find a football scholarship. It is definitely not a football factory. Yukica has tried to put what material he does have to good use. There is no reason why a school with 10,000 undergraduates and such a good reputation cannot have as good a football team as it has a basketball team.

Last season, Yukica's first at Boston College, he did what all preseason experts thought was impossible—he brought a winning record to the Eagles. The only losses the first-year coach suffered were to Penn State. Army and a squeaker to Tulane. This year he has a chance to match that record, but still doesn't see BC becoming a rival of the only Catholic football powerhouse-Notre

He is a little uneasy about returning to his old stomping grounds as an enemy. "I suppose it'll be a strange feeling to hear my alma mater being played while I'm trying to figure a way to win," said the coach who once stood at "boyhood's gate" on the Penn State campus. "But I'll be trying to

Tomorrow will be quite unusual for Joe Yuki-ca. He will still have that need for victory he had when he played for Penn State, but he will have to try and satisfy it from the opposite side of the field. Things sure are different

ITIES SERVICE OIL COMPANY, SUBSIDIARY OF CITIES SERVICE COMPANY

By BOB DIXON

Collegian Sports Writer

While baseball, or maybe now football, is the great American pastime, there is little sign of either sport outside of the United States. Throughout the rest of the world—Europe, Asia and Latin America—the game that is closest to people's hearts is soccer.

While here in the States the four-year-old first learns to swing a bat or throw a ball, in Germany or England or Brazil kids are barely able to walk before they can dribble a soccer ball or make a chest trap.

And this diversity in early training brings to point that while a Swede or an Austrian might have a hard time at pitching or quarterbacking, he's sure bound to kick the hell out of most Americans on the soccer field. Which is why the Penn State soccer team is bound to have another long day tomorrow when it entertains Maryland at 11 a.m

Foreign Team

Surc. Maryland is still part of the continental United States, but it's not so casy to say the same thing about the Terrapins' soccer team. With names like Sensoy, Charcczko and Morelli on the roster, it's not hard to see why.

Most of the starters for Maryland over the past two seasons have been international students and all that early soccer training that they got in their own countries in helping to make the Terrapins a national powerhouse.

Penn State, 2-2 after losing to Georgetown last week, has only two dual meets remaining

The PIAA event, which will be held over a special two and a half mile high school route on the University Golf Course, will include team champions from the 13 different districts

Last year Maryland went through the entire scason practically unscathed. The Terrapins ran up a 14-01 record, including tournament play, against some of the best teams in the nation and they finished with a share of the national cham-pionship, splitting the honor with Michigan State.

Now Maryland is at it again this season with a 6-0-1 record thus far, a 1-1 tie with Navy the only blemish. And the Terrapins are doing it without the services of three semors who graduated, two of them All-Americans last year. Goalie
Mario Jelencovich — who Lion coach
Herb Schmidt described as "outstanding"
— and center halfback Alvaro Bitencourt were both first team All-Americans last

Four Starters Return

Four starting linemen return from Four starting linemen return from last year, including three who combined for five goals in last year's 6-0 win over the Lions, Seniors Rocco Morcili and Frank Schoon had two goals each last year and along with senior Larry Ruhs who had one score, and junior Jerry Charczco, they return to haunt the Penn State goalie once again.

Four other starters are back to man halfback and fullback positions. Seniors Less Bernard, Peter Lowry and Paul Stiehl and sophomore Melih Sensoy, from Istanbul, Turkey, are back to give the Lion linemen fits. Two rather inexperienced goalies, senior Jim Richardson

Schmidt is well aware of the type of team Maryland is. "Maryland is a typical foreign team," the coach said. "They don't run as much as teams like Navy and West Chester because with the skills they have they don't have to run.

"With the talented personnel that Maryland gets from all over the world, they have little problem in winning. All the players work well as a team, they have good passing and ball control, and they are very strong on both offense and they are very strong on both offense and defense."

Make Changes

Make Changes

For State, which is 2-4 on the year, there will be changes made in the game plan in order to best compete against strong Maryland, and there will also be some changes in the starting lineup. With freshmen being eligible to play, it will give lineman Eric Allen, who has scored twice this year, and perhaps halfback Tom Kehan a chance to play. Most of the usual starters will play, with the possible exception of lineman Jim Watts who suffered a severely sprained ankle last week against Navy.

There's no doubt that State will be in

There's no doubt that State will be in hot water tomorrow. But as far as Schmidt is concerned, anything can happen. "They can't afford a letdown and we have everything to gain," the coach said.

For State to win tomorrow however. just anything might not be enough.
