Soviet President Hits U.S. Vietnam Policy

MOSCOW — Soviet President Nikolai V. Podgorny, speaking on the eve of the 52nd anniversary of the Bolshevik Revolution blasted President Nixon's Vietnam policy yesterday. He also accused the Nixon administration of taking "nonconstructive" stands on problems discussed by the Soviet Union and the United States.

It was the toughest attack by a Soviet leader on the Nixon administration since it came into office, and seemed to reflect growing Kremlin bitterness at U.S. policy, particularly in Vietnam.

Egypt Steps Up Battle Along Suez Canal

BEIRUT, Lebanon — Egypt stepped up its battle against Israeli troops along the Suez Canal yesterday with two commando raids'across the blocked waterway. Israel struck back with an air strike.

In Cairo, Egyptian President Gamal Abdel Nasser declared that all political efforts to settle the Middle East conflict had tailed and that war is the only answer.

"What was taken by force must be reclaimed by force," Nasser said in a speech to the Egyptian National Assembly, monitored here.

It was the worst violence in Milan since the start of Italy's "hot autumn" of labor unrest.

North Vietnamese Attack Mekong Delta

SAIGON — North Vietnamese regulars, striking from the depths of the Minh Forest, made their first large-scale attack of the war in the Mekong Delta yesterday.

Heavy fighting continued in the central highlands, where enemy soldiers assaulted two U.S. bases with grenades, automatic weapons and dynamite charges. Nine Americans died and 27 were wounded. Forty-three North Vietnamese were reported killed.

The fighting came in the wake of President Nixon's warning that a substantial increase in enemy activity might slow down American troop withdrawals.

Committee Adopts Pro-Nixon Resolution

WASHINGTON — A resolution supporting President Nixon "in his efforts to negotiate a just peace in Vietnam" was adopted yesterday by the House Foreign Affairs Committee after rejection of efforts to broaden or restrict its scope.

A 21-8 vote sent the measure into a House fight as a group of Democratic liberals asserted it was being rushed through in a manner similar to the 1964 Gulf of Tonkin resolution.

"This will be an affirmation of the President's policy giving him an open-ended authority to do what he wants in the name of gaining a just peace." said Rep. Donald M. Fraser, D-Minn., one of the eight who voted against.

McCoy Refuses Denial To BSU Duplicity Accusations

By MARGE COHEN

Collegian Feature Editor

The Dean of the College of Health, Physical Education and Recreation said he would "not respond with a detailed denial to the unfounded ac-cusations . . . of duplic i t y'' directed at him in a Wednesday press conference of the Black Student Union.

In a statement released through the University Department of Public Information. Ernest B. McCoy said "the accusations and epithets cast at me only serve to emphasize how difficult it is to make progress and how far we have to go."

McCoy was responding to charges by the BSU that he failed to uphold his part of Saturday's halftime program, despite previous plans that were made between him and members of the black academic community.

Refering to him as "Rodent McCoy," the BSU said he failed to have electrical power turned on in the press box for a record planned during the speech; that he "abruptly" cut the time of the demonstration from 12 to eight minutes; that, with the State Police, he considered the state process of the considered that the state police, he considered the state police is the state police. spired to restrict white par-ticipation; and that he did nothing to alleviate confusion of ticket takers at the gate.

The demonstration by members of the black academic community was received with boos, jeers and catcalls from among the crowd of 48.000 spectators at the Penn State—Boston College game.

To Give Proposal to Senate Unit

OSGA To Debate Senate Votes

By CINDY DAVIS

Collegian Staff Writer

A proposal for the method of choosing and numbering student representatives to the University Senate from Commonwealth Campuses is being drawn up by the Organization of Student Government Associations

In its executive meeting last night, OSGA discussed the forthcoming proposal. They then voted to ask the Senate Committee on Committees and Rules to meet with OSGA representatives before the Committee's open meeting to be scheduled in the next few weeks.

At the open meeting, the Rules Committee will hear proposals to alter the report it submitted at the University Senate meeting Tuesday. That proposal provided for extension of full voting privileges to 36 students elected to the Senate.

Senate.

Constitutional Changes

The inclusion of students with full vote would necessitate changes in the constitution, by-laws and standing rules. The presently proposed 36 members would include nine undergraduates from Commonwealth Campuses, plus the president of OSGA. The remainder of the representatives would include the presidents of the Undergraduate Student Government and the Graduate Student Association, six graduate students and eighteen undergraduates

OSGA representatives wish to meet with the Rules Committee before its open meeting so that its suggestions will be given full consideration. Concern was expressed at the meeting last night that USG's and GSA's proposals may tend to dominate the meeting

The Real Issues in the Grape Boycott

JAMPS S. HOLT

Assistant Professor of Agricultural Economics

Farm workers, both local and migratory, are unquestionably an economically disadvantaged occupational group. The reasons for this are many but they relate principally to the fact that farm workers are relatively low the fact that farm workers are relatively low skilled, have low productivity and are generally the more undesirable in our economy, and many workers working at them are doing so because they are unwilling or unable, by reasons of age, education, innate ability, geography, or for other reasons, to find and keep more remunerative employment.

There are a number of mechanisms through which society can help this disadvantaged group. Some progress, though relatively little, has been made in implementing some of these solutions.

One mechanism is to reduce the number of such workers through programs of education, job training, relocation, and rural industrialization. This directly improves the welfare of workers who move to new jobs through improved wages and working conditions, and indirectly assists those remaining in the farm labor force by reducing labor supply and thereby competing up wage rates. For the past several years, considerable resources have been devoted to programs of this type.

Several obstacles prevent this mechanism from being fully effective in solving the problem. One is the reservoir of untrained persons waiting to replace those moved from the farm work force into other occupations. A second obstacle is the limited careactive for a review.

work force into other occupations. A second obstacle is the limited capacity of many hired farm workers to absorb additional training and the time and cost required to accomplish training. A third is the strong ties of many farm workers to their occupation, place of residence and way of life which leads them to resist retraining programs.

A second mechanism that can be used to improve farm worker incomes and working conditions is through legislation directly regulating wages and working conditions. Some progress has also been made along these lines. Since 1946 most farm workers have been covered by Social Security. State and federal laws regulating child labor in agriculture, and the housing and transporting of farm workers have been esteadily strengthened. Welfare laws have been liberalized in many areas, and the level of social welfare services to farm workers has been raised. In 1967, the federal minimum wage law was amended to include hired workers on the nation's largest farms, though at a lower level of coverage than for nonfarm workers. However, farm workers are still not covered by Unemployment Insurance and in many cases by Workman's Compensation.

It has been difficult politically to accomplish more than a modest level of improvement in farm worker welfare through direct legislation because of ideological objections to this mechanism and because of fear of the impact of significant increases in farm labor costs on consumer food prices. Furthermore, it must be recognized that a substantial problem would remain even if the legislative mechanism were fully effective. That is the problem posed by those workers displaced from payrolls because of higher labor costs and the attendant acceleration in mechanization, and the problem of the reservoir of persons presently unable to find employment even in farm work.

A third mechanism for improving the lot of farm workers to recognize their right to organize and bargain collectively and then let them negotiate with their employers about wage rates, working conditions and job security. This right is presently possessed by many (though not all) other workers, and bills have been introduced to extend this right to farm workers in several recent sessions of Congress. Such a solution would avoid the ideological objections to legislating wages and working conditions directly. It would, to some extent, provide a mechanism for moderating the displacement of farm workers by machine. It would not solve the problems of those workers who were nevertheless displaced, nor the problems of those unable to find employment. It would also possess the potential disadvantage of providing a group of workers with a stranglehold on employers and ultimately the nation's food supply if the legislation was not carefully prepared. (However, I teel the magnitude of this danger has been greatly overstated.) The resulting impact on consumer food prices is not known.

It is possible for farm workers to organize, bargain collectively and strike at the present food prices is not known.

It is possible for farm workers to organize, bargain collectively and strike at the present time if they choose. However, the procedures for assuring recognition of a union and the orderly resolution of disputes provided in Federal and state labor legislation are not applicable to farm workers. What is being proposed in the bills from Congress is the extension of the extension of similar to farm workers.

The central issue in the grape boycott is not how good or bad the wages and working conditions of California table grape pickers are. The issue is not whether the Delano grape vincyards are large or small, whether they are operated by families or giant corporations or where their workers live. The issue is how to improve the welfare of all hired farm workers. A partial solution to this problem is through extending to farm workers legislative recognition and protection of their right to organize and bargain collectively if they choose. Much of the time and energy that should be devoted to working toward the passage of such legislation has been diverted to arguments over questions of the farm work force. Unquestionably there has been much exaggeration and half truths in the public statements of both sides. However, the arguments, exaggerated or not, are beside arguments, exaggerated or not, are beside the arguments, exaggerated or not, are beside the point.

It seems that a far more productive outlet for the energies of those concerned with the welfare of farm workers is to actively support and lobby for the passage of legislation recognizing the rights at farm workers to bargain collectively, so that boycotts of every agricultural commodity need not be undertaken. Secondly, such persons must plan for and actively support programs designed to dertaken. Secondly, such persons must plan for and actively support programs designed to assist displaced farm workers and the rural unemployed to qualify for and find suitable employment or other means of support. And finally, such persons must recognize that we, the consumers of the nation's food and fibre, are the ones who have "benefited" from the low wages and miserable working conditions of farm workers. To the extent that the problem is solved, we are also the ones who will have to pay the bill, in our tax checks and at the grocery store.

It Was Too Late

By BEVERLEY WYATT Collegian Arts Critic

Last Friday night saw the continuation of this year's Artist Series with a presentation of a cappella music by the nationally known Riverside Singers. The group made its debut in 1958, after receiving training at the Julliard and Eastman Schools The members are especially known for their range of composers, styles and languages in vocal performance and their individual abilities as soloists.

The program last week consisted of pieces chosen to illustrate the similarity between vocal compositions of the 16th century and today, but with emphasis on accenting the subtle differences. The singers performed pieces by several 16th century artists: Schutz, Weelkes, Bateson, Gibbons, Wilbye, Arcadelt. Gabriele, Luzzaschi, Gastoldi, Passercau, Jannequin, Costeley, and Claude le Jenne.

The modern composers performed were Francis Poulenc and Thomas Wagner. Alan Baker, baritone and spokesman for the six member group, explained throughout the program several things about the music which were quite useful for the unpracticed listener and helped to establish some contact between the performers and their audience.

From his explanation of the program's approach I exby the overbalancing of the program, especially since half of it seemed devoted to madrigals, which were well developed in bringing out the 'horizontal' movement of the style and the interplay of the different voices but which had a slight tendency

I particularly enjoyed the six short pieces by Poulenc performed by the three women, Diana Hoagland,-soprano, Joan Mey-soprano, and Barbara Crouch-mezzo-soprano, Poulenc's music reflected beautifully his theme of children in various moods and activities. The trio of women's voices was a pleasant contrast and added variety to the rest of the program of rather staid music. I hoped that the men would also perform as a trio, but I was again disappointed.

In fact the whole program rather left me a little flat. Perhaps I don't have a brilliant listening ear; more likely I just don't know enough about musical styles and performance technique to fully appreciate the nuances of such a performance. However, I do know that the encores performed by the group certainly pleased and excited more than the rest of the whole program put together.

It seems to me an error on the part of programming that they did not include a wider variety of styles in the first place. Most student audiences are largely composed of laymen musicians, and as such, many delicacies of musicianship may go unappreciated. After the 'tormal' performance was completed and the Singers found themselves well received, despite the apparent restlessness of their audience at times, the whole group seemed to relax.

They then sang "Nicolette", a French version of "Little Red Riding Hood" that included a French slightly 'dirty old man' in its vocal interpretation that was delightful; and followed this with "A Geographical Fugue," a musically spoken piece that savored the sounds of place names, playing with them 'horizontally' much in the manner of a madrigal.

The singers relaxed, opened up and enjoyed themselves, and I believe this was what was missing from their scheduled performance. Especially in the second half of the program, during "For the Girl with the Little Bean Nose" I noticed that the vocalists seemed to be tensing and trying too hard.

On the whole the singers blended well. From the floor Anthony Tamburello-bass sounded better than he did from the balcony. This may have been due to the weird acoustics of Schwab, but he may have been singing more poorly in the cond half of the program than in the first half.

At times there seemed to be too much vibrato and at others the tone came through sounding muddy. I particularly enjoyed Barbara Crouch, her mezzo-soprano range often stretching to an alto; and tenor Joseph Porello sang with great range and control as did baritone Alan Baker.

But I enjoyed the encores most, both for their novelty and personality brought into play, as well as for their musicianship. Somehow the rest of the program lacked the feeling and energy and aliveness necessary to the dynamic performance that was packed into these two pieces. I don't like being 'shown' the soul of a song or a piece of music. I like to see it and feel it happening. When it 'happens' in the perrmers it can 'happen' in me, and unfortunately nothing started happening Friday night until the encores; by then it

(Editor's note: The following is an open letter to PSU's black students.)

DEAR BLACK STUDENTS: I beseech you to do some thinking. I, being a youth myself, realize that impetuosity and hereditary viewpoints often are more responsible for my actions than the more difficult process of thinking. But reason does a much better job of guidance than emotion. When reason and rational actions are used in my dealings with society. I am usually reacted to reasonably or rationally.

Last week when I heard from the news media that the half-time ceremony would be presented by the Black Student Union. I was tilled with hope. I was hoping that it would be a proud presentation of a culture that is struggling for recognition, Maybe a listing of historic gifts to humanity or accomplishments in the arts.

The Negro race has a right to be proud. It has a right to have its accomplishments displayed in the University. I don't think a presentation of this type would have been jeered. I think it would have been chightening to many ignorant people.

But my hopes were dashed to the ground. The half-time ecremony was a series of irrational accusations. A distribe spurred predominantly by emotion, and it was greeted by emotion by the people being accosted.

Later, reading the newspaper, I find that the same leaders who programmed the half-time ceremony have noted President Walker's invitation to meet and discuss differences. Did they approach him, either vocally or in writing, with the respect due to a University president? No. They have dared him and other administrators to appear before them. Unless President Walker is an exceptional man, I can expect nothing better than a flat relusal. The idea was not wrong, the presentation was.

Booer Clarifies Position

TO THE EDITOR: I happen to be one of those imbiciles, racists, etc., who chose to boo the BSU speaker at half-time of last Saturday's football game, and I would like to clarify the reasons I did so to my accusers. It seems that everyone not agreeng with their point of view is considered ignorant, but let those open-minded persons listen to another point of view.

I believe that there is a time and place for everything. A football field is no place for a mass protest against the admission standards of the University. I was admitted on the same standards as most of my class, and do not wish to see them lowered.

same standards as most of my class, and do not wish to see them lowered.

If it were, the Univerity would become an oversized high school, I concede the right of the BSU to make a statement, but honestly, at a tootball game? Wouldn't a protest at the Admissions office, or a mass rally on Old Main lawn accomplish the same thing? At least those who wanted to participate could go, and those who didn't could reserve their right to stay away. At a football game, we had no choice but to either participate or boo. (Silence would be taken as a sign of support for the BSU.)

Shapp Answers Column

TO THE EDITOR: Note the article that appeared in the Daily' Collegian on Oct. 17th entitled "Shapp 'Uses' Viet Nam."

When Mr. Nestor states that I called the Vietnam War, Nixon's war, he is correct. After all, who else is in charge now? Calling Vietnam Nixon's war now is just like the stand I took in 1966, 1967 and 1968, when I was calling the war LBJ's war. And, may I add, if anything was politically harmful in 1966 it was a Democratic candidate for high office in a major that participing on actions of his warty leader in the White 1966 it was a Democratic candidate for high office in a major state criticizing any actions of his party leader in the White House.

Unfortunately, although it was a tight squeeze, Mr. Nixon won in 1968. One reason he won was that he claimed he had a plan to end the war. This play has yet to see daylight. Perhaps the pressure being exerted by me and millions of others in the nation will goad the President into establishing Nixon's Peace. I shall be glad to give him full credit if only he stops the war. As for Sen. Hugh Scott, when he voted first for funding ABM and then for cuts in domestic programs and virtually accused all those who planned to participate in the Oct. 15th Moratorium as tools of Hanoi, he laid himself open to attack. Interestingly enough, the Moratorium sure opened the Senator's eyes. Two days later he was urging a unilateral cease tire.

Bailey Defends Keddie

TO THE EDITOR: I do not speak for any student or faculty organization in the comments that follow. As a Black faculty member involved in campus activities since my arrival in September, 1968. I strongly oppose any attempt to organize elements in this community either in "reading." Dr. Wells Keddie from the Movement or in asking for his removal from the faculty.

Anyone with an ounce of political awareness realizes full well that the Movement needs Wells. I am not going to dwell on the obviousness of his significant contributions to Penn State in that regard. Instead, I wish to stress his importance to demonstrate Dr. Keddie's value to his fellow colleagues. I shall cite only one.

Last Saturday, in Beaver Stadium when the Black Student Union and its white allies transformed the football stadium into a "think-tank" for eight minutes, he and a few other white faculty and students were part of a phase of the program which was denied a chance to fulfill its mission. After viewing photos and listening to taperecordings of faculty and administrators in the stands during the Black program, I was struck by two contrasting images: (1) One image was of the strength and determination of Wells Keddie in his personal committment to the struggle of people on the field that day. (2) The other image was one of the fear and uncertainty on the faces and in the hearts of his white colleagues in the stands.

When the chips are down for people. Dr. Keddle is where when the emps are down for people. Dr. Reddie is where it counts! He is with them!! He is available for counsel, and he also can be relied upon for personal sacrifice and witness. This is highly important! From my vantage point, this overwhelmingly timid, nearly all-white faculty needs Professor Reddie.

Instead of calling for the removal of an action-scholar of Instead of calling for the removal of an action-scholar of his type, The Collegian should be about the task of trying to organize a program to attract more people like him. TO THE EDITOR: I am compelled out of a profound wonder to write in reference to the black students' astonishingly lived and perceptive analysis of their receptions at halfitime during Saturday's game. Grape Strike Comment

To the editors: In his article in the Nev. 6 Faculty Forum, Professor Cooper painted a glowing picture of the paternalistic California grape growers by quoting directly from the propaganda of the growers themselves. In so doing, he not only showed his naivete of the field of labor-management relations, but he also displayed a shocking lack of knowledge of the cause of the grape boycott.

The boycott was organized because agricultural workers, such as the grape pickers, are denied the protection which has been afforded workers in private industry since 1935 of organizing unions of their own choosing and bargaining collectively with their employer. If the growers are in fact presently paying more than the United Farm Workers Organizing Committee is asking in wages, why are they so strongly resisting the attempt of their workers to organize?

The answer must lie in the fact that the grape pickers are seeking no more than having a say in the determination of the conditions under which they work, and in so doing are challenging the absolute authority of the growers who currently dictate conditions to their workers.

The world is constantly in peril. War threatens to ravage it, the bomb to pulverize it. poverty to exhaust it, ignorance to retard it-all are serious, immediate problems that draw some degree of attention from just about every body.

True pop art jars the senses of those who experience it. So prepare to follow the message and mood of each of the Nyiosongs. She's got soul.

"New York Tendaberry" is a strange, torbidden fruit that will always be in season. It is a testament to the hopeful future of pop.

And the best thing about Laura Nyro is the promise of more to come. As the pop arust of the seventies, she is just beginning to flourish.

"Turning Point" (Polydor-24-4004) is an aptly named example of why John Mayall is recognized and respected as a leader of the blues movement.

Lately in music, the "market" has replaced the "movement." Popularity has resulted in an overcrowded stagnation that threatens the future of the blues. Recognizing this, Mayall attempts change for a new direction that keeps tradition alive, but requivenates it with diversity.

Mayall's "new blues" is a logical mixture of fathers and sons, of traditional blues with jazz forms. The music is low-volume, employing acoustic "linger style" guitar instead of the amplified electric guitar that abounds today. His new band uses no drums because Mayall feels that "each instrument has its own rhythmic pattern." The overall affect of the Mayall experiment is a far cry from early Muddy Waters, but it works.

With clear cool, "California" defines the new blues. It begins with Mayall singuig in traditional blues patterns, then shifts to an extended jazz fabric with exciting, explorative soles by John Mark on guitar and Johnny Almond on sax. After nine minutes, Mayall's soft vocal returns to end the composition. If I were teaching a course on the future of the blues, "California" would be my primer, a hornbook of blues and jazz.

But not everyone will like "Turning Point." John Mayall is a very complicated artist, His work is an aquired taste, never an instant hit.

As something that transcends the market, validly attempting to affect perpetuation of an art form with change and growth, "Turning Point" succeeds.

Listen to it for a forecast of just how we'll be paving our dues befere long. If the album does nothing else for vou, it proves something that the musicians have always known; jazz is blue' is jazz is blue' is jazz.

Cocker is not satisfied with the relative security of a recognized, accepted label. On "Joe Cocker" (A&M-SP-4221), the "English Ray Charles" demonstrates a desire to risk his royaltes in areas other than "straight soul." And his method of delivering is more important than his ambition.

Few artists can successfully record an entire album of songs by other performers. The public has not wanted to hear the same thing twice since Ronald Reagen did "The Ballad of Davy Crockett" for one of his movies. The only way to make an eclectic. collective cover version like "Joe Cocker!" work is to make each song better than the original. This Cocker does, with the Beatles. "Bathroom Window." Bob Dylan's "Dear Landlord" and "Darling Be Home Soon," first heard from The Lovin' Spoonful.

Cocker's cool is very self-conscious. This has offended many who have seen him live, although not strongly enough to cause anyone to leave a performance. But Cocker's cool is a real part of him, something that shines through in everything he sings. And that's one of the reasons why this album is good, where other such attempts are merely repetitious. Dylan's version of "Dear Landlord" was musically washed out, a tonge-in-check prayer. Cocker sings it with less reverence, like James Brown ordering his thousandth pair of shoes.

"Darling Be Home Soon" was a moving, adoles-"Darling Be Home Soon" was a moving, adolescent plea, like singing to your bedroom wall over eight grade grammar and a glass of milk. Cocker turns the song around and beefs it up, like a Charles Atlas course that works.

From "Lawdy Miss Clawdy" to "Hitchcock Railway," Cocker makes every song his own.

Do not overlook the backup vocals on this album, supplied by "The Grease Band." Cocker's regular traveling musicians. They oo-be-doo their way behind many of the songs, adding fiery lunk sung with a smile.

Penn State Radio Club Exhibit Offers Message Transmissions

have a message to send your friend, whether he (or shc) is in Vietnam, South America. Europe or anywhere in the world, go to the Penn State Amateur Radio Club's exhibition this week on the ground floor of the Hetzel Union Building.

The Radio Club, started last Spring Term, is handling personal messages as a service to students. At their exhibit the club is recruiting members and taking messages. So far the club has received requests to send almost 200 messages.

Messages are sent either by direct radio transmission or by a more con-venient system called phone patch. The phone patch system enables a person to send his message by a phone radio hookup anywhere in the world.

Spring Term alone the club sent 480 messages, 150 of which went to Vietnam. One student was able to send an urgent message to his brother at Guantanamo Bay, Cuba. Another contacted a relative in Bogota. Columbia. There are no restrictions to where messages can be

Anyone who is interested can join the club. Membership is not representative of one field of majors. The membership of close to 60 includes majors from various colleges.

The Radio Club's potential for serving the students is great since it offers students an opportunity to send important messages anywhere almost instantly and with a purch more personal touch. If with a much more personal touch. If there is ever any overflow of messages, several of the club members have their own equipment to handle them.

Foreign Studies Office: New Name, New Image

Collegian Staff Writer

The University Study Abroad Pro-

The University Study Abioad Program no longer exists.

In its place is the Office of Foreign Studies. Although both are basically the same, there are several important differences. The office now offers advice and counsel to students wishing to study independently outside this country without losing University credits and offers organized foreign studies programs in Germany, Spain. Italy, England and Costa Rica.

The new title is also part of a new image for the program. Director Dagobert DeLevie explained. "We are not a travel business; we are a study program." he said.

Lasting 14 weeks each, the programs in Cologne, Salamanca, Strasbourg and San Jose are mainly to enrich the student's understanding and knowledge of a foreign language, although courses in the history and culture of the host country are offered. They are open to all University students who are of sophomore standing or above with at least a 2.50 all-University average and can earn the student 12 credits.

The cost, including living accommodations in dormitories and private

The cost, including living accommodations in dormitories and private homes, is the regular one term tuition and room and board fee plus a $35 program fee. Transportation expenses

For those interested in art history there is a 10 week course in Rome for students of sophomore standing with at least eight credits in Italian.

There is a teacher (raining program in Durham, England as well as a fine arts course in London.

Also offered is a program for fourth year architectural students in Italy and England.

Italy and England.

Since the program was instituted in 1962, 917 Pennsylvania State University students have gone overseas, but the program is two-sided. The University was the first university in the United States to exchange students with the University of Cologne, Germany, when in 1964, 23 German students arrived at University Park. Again in 1968, the University was the first American host to students from Strasbourg, France. Last year eight students from Costa Rica came here to study. According to DeLevie, selection of the 150 participants each year is on a purely academic basis. He expressed concern at the small number of black students involved, DeLevie said he conferred with Ted Thompson, Undergraduate Student Government president about possible remedies. Thompson said there are no plans to institute a quota system, but black students will be encouraged to apply son said there are no plans to institute a quota system, but black students will be encouraged to apply.

If financial difficulty exists, there is a grant-in-aid program. DeLevie explained that the fund is limited, since it relies totally on outside contributions and receives no state funds. Only students in financial need will be considered for grants, he said.

Paul M. Althouse, vice president for Resident Instruction, was pessimistic about state funds being made available for the grant-in-aid program.

"It's a question of priorities," he explained. "Is the money best used by sending a student to France or by admitting a student to the University who might never get here in the first place." Althouse questioned.

The Office of Foreign Studies is a department of Althouse's office. As part of their responsibility, he and DeLevie traveled to the various foreign institutions for 14 days last spring.

"The program is tremendous." Althouse said. He added his hope to see more students involved, but "the problem is that these universities are just as crowded as we are." Althouse encouraged the exchange of students. He said that there is as much to be gained by foreigners coming here as Americans going abroad.

Among students who have participated in the past, the reaction is highly favorable.

Jack Shreve (10th-English-West Middlesex) was full of praise for his term in Salamanca. Spain. He was very impressed with the organization of the University program.

"The other schools were much, much worse than ours." he said.

Shreve expressed regret that he didn't have a fully developed language course. He claimed he had no trouble understanding Spanish, but "my vocabulary was a problem." he recalled. He lived with a family and said "after a few weeks I fought with them just like I do at home" He corresponds with friends in Salamanca and expressed a desire to return in the future.

YAF Denounces Grape Boycott

The Young Americans for Freedom last night unanimously approved a statement denouncing the current grape boycott.

In issuing the statement, YAF member Tom Nagle called for YAF to take a firm stand and to "at least make people stop and think.

"Cesar Chavez is starting a bandwagon rolling and everybody is jumping on it without thinking." Nagle said. According to the YAF statement, people are being offered only "emotional cliches instead of valid reasons" for participating in the boycott.

The statement also pointed out that if vineyard owners raise wages, the only other alternative would be to raise Montross said YAF is attempting to find a speaker through the Harry Walker organization, which provides famous speakers at reasonable costs.

At Beaver Stadium Tomorrow

eet Indiana

By DAN DONOVAN Assistant Sports Editor

A group of kids will be having fun tomorrow playing a little bit of football. They will not be playing in the windswept quad out at East Halls or in the ivy setting of West Halls. They won't have to beware of the chains which rope off the sidewalks, or avoid running a pattern right into a group of girls. They will be playing in the groy confines of Reaver playing in the grey confines of Beaver Stadium.

Despite the auspicious setting, when the Penn State Heshmen meet the first-year men from Indiana University of Pennsylvania, the game planned will be similar to the pickup games played in the

The pressure which effects varsity games will not be felt. There will be no rum-soaked fans who paid 86 a head to see the Liors win. Students will be admitted free and others will be charged only $1. The outcome of the game will not effect any polls or bowl bids, it will be played just for the lun of it.

"Kids like to play games," freshmen coach Earl Bruce explains. "It's no fun to practice and not be able to play a game. Freshmen contests are basically to stimulate interest."

The fans who do travel the distance out to the Stadium will naturally be trying to peg the Reids, Pittmans and Onkotzes of the future. According to Bruce, that's not the purpose of the game at all.

"The freshmen team is basically organized to groom players for the varsity." Bruce said, "but to field a full team a lot of players will not be in their natural positions. It would be hard to predict a future for them." dict a future for them.

"We weren't bad on offense against West Virginia," Bruce said, noting that two touchdowns were foiled by penaltics.

He expects a much better offensive show against Indiana tomorrow basically because the team has had more time to practice.

No Comparisons

Bruce begs off comparing this year's edition with other Penn State freshmen. "It's always hard to compare teams further back than last year." Bruce said, "but we definitely don't have the backwe had last year. We recruited a lot of linemen rather than backs this year.

Last year's freshmen, considered by many the best ever at Penn State, had about six backs, including Lydell Mitchell and Franco Harris, who ran wild over State's two frosh opponents,

This year several freshmen will have This year several freshmen will have familiar backgrounds. Two New Jersey backs (shades of Mitchell and Harris), named Carrol Cayette and Bruce Bannon will be in the backfield. Lewchenko is particularly worthy of note as the barrel-classed freshmen came to Penn State weighing 292—pounds. The 63 tackle has been "trimmed" to 270-pounds.

Tomorrow they won't be thinking about their futures, however. They will be playing to have fun and, of course, to endless. Like the one about him getting up early on the morning of a big game two years ago and hurrying to a test, of all things.

Onkotz Returns to Spotlight

By DON McKEE Collegian Sports Editor

Joe Paterno had offered to call the professor and try to get him off, but Onkotz wouldn't hear of it. "I want to go," he said. "I wouldn't sleep, anyhow." The funny thing is Onkotz probably got an A on the test.

Another story that gets a lot of play is how Jim Carlen, the head coach at West Virginia, constructed his entire offense to go away from Onkotz in the game at Morgantown last year.

So after Carlen had put in all that time revamphis offense, Onkotz killed him anyway.

Penn State was named yesterday by both the Sugar and Cotton Bowl selection committees as possible candidates for bowl bids. Other Cotton Bowl candidates announced were Tennessee (which would prefer the Orange Bowl), Missouri, Georgia, Auburn, Alabama, Nebraska, Kansas State, Florida and Louisiana State. Besides Penn State, the Cotton Bowl is interested in Tennessee, Texas, Arkansas and Missouri. Arkansas and Missouri.

"Everywhere we went, he went too," Carlen moaned. Onkotz made two key interceptions in the Lions' 31-21 win, running one back for the score that buried the Mountaineers

The latest Onkotz story concerns football itself, not any specific game. It seems that the All-

"It looks much worse from the sidelines than it The stories people tell about Denny Onkotz are really is," Onkotz said. "The hitting looks ferocious. Maybe that's why so many people like it. It's not that ferocious when you're out there.

But when Onkotz is on the field football is easy to watch, especially when he gets a chance to step out of his role as a linebacker and run with the ball.

In his first two varsity seasons, Onkotz ran back two interceptions for touchdowns (one won the vital several other near-misses.

But this year has been different. Onkotz hadn't run back a punt for a touchdown until last week and hasn't made any intercept ons as vet. So when he finally got a touchdown on a punt return against Boston College, it was like a whole new season.

"We had the punt block on for that play," Onkotz said, "and on the play when we blocked the punt earlier in the game, we had a pent return on."

The touchdown was Onkotz' first rally spectacular play of the season, but he's still been doing an All-American job, according to his coach.

"Denny Onkotz is probably having the best year of his career," Paterno said "People say ne hasn't made any interceptions but it's because people don't throw into his zone anymore. They're afraid he'll intercept.

Team Man

But Onkotz doesn't worry about himself-he thinks about the team. "I think we're playing good, solid football," he said. "It's not just me. Being an All-American last year can't help me this season. As far as I'm concerned there are a lot of better guys on this defensive unit who deserve All-American honors. Mike Reid, Steve Smear and Jim Kates are just three.

And Onkotz doesn't let the possibility of a professional career affect his play, either. "If I'm drafted and if I get a good offer, I'd like to play," Onkotz said. "But I really want to go to grad school. too. Molecular Biology. That's my thing." He probably DID get an A on that test. And he'll probably get All-American honors again this year. That's the best of all the Onkotz stories.

Venture: Purify water with the fiber that made men whistle.

Nylon. Reverse osmosis. A fiber that started making girls' legs more beautiful some 30 years ago. And a process that's been around a lot longer.

But when Du Pont scientists and engineers look at them in a new way, they combine into an idea that can change the world. Reverse osmosis is a purification process that requires no phase change. It's potentially the cheap est way to desalinate water.

Du Pont's innovation? Hollow, semipermeable ny Ion fibers much finer than human hair. Symmetrical, with an outer diameter of .002 inch and a wall thickness of .0005 inch, with an accuracy of manufacture maintained at close to 100%. Twenty-five to 30 million of them encased in a precisely engineered unit 14 inches in diameter by 7 feet long.

The result: a semipermeable surface area of about 85,000 square feet-the size of a 2-acre lot-and up to 10,000 gallons of desalted water per day. So far "Permasep" permeators have been used experimentally to purify brackish and polluted water, and in various industrial separations. But the potential to desalt seawater, too, is there. So Du Pont scientists and engineers are even now working toward improved fibers, units and plant designs that should make it possible to get fresh water from salt at a price that any town or nation can afford. Innovation—applying the known to discover the unknown, inventing new materials and putting them to work, using research and engineering to create the ideas and products of the future—this is the venture Du Pont people are now engaged in. For a variety of career opportunities, and a chance

The Lions are barely off to a better start this year, owning a 2-5 record with two games to go. The first of those remaining battles is tomorrow when they again meet the invading Owls.

What was State's trouble last season is their problem again now. . . the definite lack of scoring power. Lion coach Herb Schmidt blamed his impotent offense last year for the troubles he had, but the front line somehow came alive against Temple and put together an attack that nearly beat the Owls.

Harriers Face Panthers

By GLENN SHEELEY Collegian Sports Writer

In a year at Penn State when sophomores seem to shine on the gridiron, the case in point fails to stop with just football. The Nittany Lion fails to stop with just football. The Nittany Lion cross-country team features a couple of first-year men who can romp with the best of them. Coach Harry Groves is banking heavily on sophomores Greg Fredricks and Jerry Henderson as the Pitt Panthers pull into town for tomorrow's meet at 2 p.m. Pittsburgh, unbeaten in six contests this year, puts its string on the line while Penn State will attempt to better its 3-2 season mark.

Last week the Lions toppled the Syracuse Orangemen 15-49 with Henderson coming through with a winning effort, crossing the five-mile mark in 25.49. Teammate Fredricks wheeled in just behind his speedy classmate grabbing the second position. Fredricks has compiled the best record this year among the harriers and along with Henderson have been instrumental in State's performance thus far.

Those Ratings Again.. Dunkel Disappoints

By PENNY WEICHEL Collegian Sports Columnist

The Dunkel Ratings. I suppose you know what they are. Every football team has a number, say like 40.0 which means that that school is 10 points better than a 30.0 club and 10 points worse than a 50.0 squad. Texas this week rates highest on the Dunkel scale with a 114.2 rating (yeah, higher than You-KnowWho's 113.3) and if the Longhorns were to play Haverford with its 1.0 rating, Street and co. would have to beat the Main Line losers by 113 points or risk a drop in the ratings.

Devised in 1929 by Dick Dunkel, the Dunkel Ratings, a syndicated feature in many an American newspaper, is not 100 percent foolproof. In fact, 70 to 75 percent might prove more reasonable. I know. I've been keeping the tabs over the past three weeks

In a 163 major college games over that time span, Dunkel has come up with 118 correct selections (ties are counted wrong since by this system, a knot could be predicted) for a not-so-pulse-stopping 72 per cent, which isn't any better than my hurried emotional choices.

And Dunkel, as I've mentioned, picks the point spreads. Of the 118 correct responses, Dunkel has come within five points 39 times for 33 percent, within six to 10 points 26 times for 22 percent (in other words hes come within 10 points 55 percent of the time) and missed the boat altogether by coming within more than 10 points 53 times for 46 percent.

Still, these are interesting little action-packed decimals for the amateur mathematician to play around with. Just take a stroll through Dunkel's ratings some Thursday morning, and you'll see.

For instance, I have taken the liberty of perhaps adding apples to oranges and dividing by dog biscuits (I really can't say if this is legit or not) to find the average Dunkel of the five Most Respected major college football conferences—the Big 10, Southeast Conference, Southwest Conference, Big Eight and the Pacific

Big 10 Interpretation. The Big 10 can be thankful for Ohio State, the only team with a rating of above 100. Five schools—half the league—have a rating in the 80's and three others are doomed in the 70's. Bow down to the Big 10 the next time you're facing

The same can be said for the SWC who can pluck a turkey over Texas and Arkansas a few Thursdays from now. The rest of the league has really birdied with al their 80 and 70

On the other hand, there's the SEC with six of 10 powerhouses over the century mark and one other, Alabama, over 90. The circuit's three dogs-Mississippi State, Vandy and Kentucky—are fit company (all above 80) are fit company for the so-so yo-yos in everybody else's terri-

Then there's the nation's presidentially declared disaster area—The East—with Penn State over 100, West Virginia over 90, Syracuse and Pitt over 80 and Army and Navy over 70. Not really bad for a disaster area. And look—there's Villanova standing at 82.6 and who would be favored over most of Ohio State's first seven opponents. Even Buffalo State which rates a 73.6 would be a Dunkel choice to take Illinois. The Bulls' schedule is sprinkled with Ball State and Dayton and Temple and such.

Pollsters and other people knock the Nittany Lions because they play Ohio and Boston College, right? Well, here's the game of the year for them. Prestigious Ole Miss is paired with Chattanooga this Saturday. A 46 point favorite by Dunkel's standards.

The fact is Chatty has a 57.8 Dunkel Rating. Now what would people say if Penn State parlayed with Wilkes College some weekend? They d drop the Lions to a "Teams Inconceivable of Ever Receiving a Vote Category," but low and behold Dickie's formula would consider the Colonels a one point favorite over the Choo-Choos. I don't like to say, "Hmmm,", but Hmmm.

Nicklaus Tops Starters In Hawaiian Tourney

HONOLULU (AP) — Jack Nicklaus ripped out a fantastic wind blown 63, nine-under par, and established a four-stroke lead in the first round of the $125,000 Hawaiian International Open Golf Tournament yesterday.

Nicklaus, winner of his last two starts, set a course record on the 7,020-yard par 72 Waralac Country Club layout and threatened to run away from the rest of the 144 man field.

Only Ken Still, winner of two events this year, and Dave Stockton kept the golden bear in sight with 67s.

Nicklaus, who has picked up $48,000 in his last two tourneys and is admittedly gunning for still more improvement in the list of money winners, had what he called "one of my best putting rounds ever."
