S. Viefnamese Losses on the Increase
SAIGON — The South Vietnamese army lost 479 troops killed in action last week, more than four times the U.S. toll and reflecting Saigon's increasing combat role, the allied commands reported yesterday.

American battle deaths were 113, or 16 more than the week before but well below the weekly average of 193 for the year. The toll of South Vietnamese killed was the highest in nine weeks. Enemy deaths last week were reported as 3.013.

The South Vietnamese have taken heavy casualties in the past week in fighting about 5.000 North Vietnamese menacing the two camps north of Saigon.

Initial Week of Arms Curb Talks Ends

HELSINKI — The United States and the Soviet Union ended yesterday a cautious first week of arms curb talks and kept the rest of the world wondering how the chances look for controlling the nuclear arms race.

Enforced isolation was academic for the moonwalkers and for Richard Gordon whom they joined later in the command thip Yankee Clipper. The three were a quarter of a million miles from the nearest human's company.

Health officials and scientists worried before Apollo 11 that man's first few visitors to the moon could bring back diseases that could spread like wildfire on the earth.

To combat this possibility, officials decided on a 21-day carefully controlled isolation.

Simple Rites Mark Kennedy Funeral

BROCKLINE, Mass. – Joseph P. Kennedy was buried yesterday after a simple funeral service that included a eulogy by his surviving son, Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, and recitation of the 23rd Psalm by his grandson, 8-year-old John F. Kennedy Jr.

The funeral was in Hyannis, Mass., not far from the family compound on Cape Cod, and the body was brought here for burial beneath a stone marker that read simply, "Ken-

The former ambassador to Britain died Tuesday at 81 af-

Senate committee meeting last night continued debate over the most representative means of electing students to the Senate.

The Committee on Committees and Rules heard proposals from student groups that backed election through various combinations of residential and college constituencies. In its November report, the committee had recommended direct election through colleges.

The Undergraduate Student Government, in proposing 36 University Park undergraduate representatives, recommended that 25 students be elected "through the offices of USG Congress," one each from the ten University colleges and one ex officio membership—the USG president.

Residential Constituencies

Student Senate membership through the offices of USG, administered according to residential constituencies, would be open to any University Park undergraduate desiring to run for a seat.
Nina Comly, president of the Association of Women Students, rejected USG's proposal.

"Interests in the colleges have been de-emphasized for too long. USG's proposal would undermine their prestige because they would only be electing students to a body,

Edward Beckwith, president of the Inter-College Council Board, said he "assumed the committee's report meant election through the college councils."

Committee Chairman William Rabinowitz

Committee Chairman William Rabinowitz said that the committee's report didn't specify election through the councils.

Committee Report

The committee report states: "Each college at University Park shall provide at least one (1) undergraduate student senator, Additional undergraduate student senators shall be allocated to colleges at University Park on the basis of relative enrollment."

The Committee also proposed that membership in the Senate should not exceed 244 members, apportioned as follows: 172 elected members of the faculty, 36 students and 36 exofficio or appointed senators. All would have voting rights.

Public Debate Called for in Fiscal Crisis Public Debate Called for in Fiscal Crisis

HARRISBURG — After 17 fruitless closed-door meetings aimed at solving the state's money crisis, it may be time for legislative leaders to bring the debate before the public.

A suggestion for this radical way of doing legislative business came from the Pennsylvania Association of Taxpayer Leagues, a citizens group which claims membership in 20 counties, mostly in western Pennsylvania.

Concurring with this idea is Sen. D. Elmer Hawbaker, R-Franklin, who agrees with the group that the state's spending should be kept as close as possible to last year's level.

Hawbaker, who several months ago proposed a streamlined $2.1 billion budget that never came out of committee, thinks they should.

MONIGOMENT, Ala. (Ar.) — vice President Spito I. Agnew, asserting there is "growing monopolization of the voices of public opinion," aimed particular criticism yesterday at The New York Times and The Washington Post.

"Just as a politician's words—wise and foolish—are dutifully recorded by the press and television to be thrown up to him at the appropriate time, so their words should likewise be recorded and likewise recalled."

Arguing that many of the critics of his attacks on the networks ignored the main thrust of his remarks, Agnew elaborated on what he said is his principal point:

"When they, the news media, go beyond fair comment and criticism they will be called upon to defend their statements and their positions just as we must defend ours. And when their criticism becomes excessive or unjust, we shall invite them down from their itory towers to enjoy the rough and tumble of the public debate." The vice president said:

"I do not seek to intimidate the press, the networks or anyone else from speaking out. But the time for blind acceptance of their opinions is past. And the time for naive belief in their neutrality is gone."

"The Crucible" Burns:

Fire for Proof of Fear

The professor knows each one by name, and has made an effort throughout the term to call on as many students as possible and to keep the class discussion as relevant and interesting as possible.

Most students think the teacher is good. He has control of the class, is amazingly humorous at times and keeps discussions on a level commensurate with the students' knowledge of the class material.

But there are 70 students in the class, all jammed into an uncomfortable room. And this is where Colloquy's "human dimension of higher education"

For no matter how proficient a professor is in relating to his students or in keeping a discussion stimulating, 70 students cannot relate to the professor in any way resembling a dialogue.

But the case cited here is exemplary. At least in this class there is an excellent professor and fewer than 100 students.

Too frequently, however, students taking introductory courses and even electives are forced into their educations in an impersonal, assembly line style.

They are fed facts like a bottling machine pounds caps on soda bottles. And when midterms and finals come around, the result is frequently no more than a cursory inspection of the term's memorization.

The term "free interchange of ideas" is a common one at any university. It is what one Greek philosopher believed was the essence of education. It involves a sort of "pick the brains of the other guys" approach.

Collegian Drama Critic

to get caught up in a melodrama that is exciting and horrifying. To watch the University Theatre's production of 'The Crucible' is to experience the horror of the moment's reality. It is like being a member of the court, a close friend of the people involved, a Puritan farmer as convinced, confused and aghast as any man or woman there; and it is being as possessed as each of them is possessed with the fear, power and duty of them all.

each of them is possessed with the fear, power and duty of them all.

Why? Only tremendous depth of character work results in this kind of conviction and intensity. The Crucible' burns with an empathy of peculiar complexity. It springs from the actors and the personalities behind the costumes as well as those within the script. It electrifies everyone on stage and spreads inexorably into the audience. But it comes not just from the situations within the play or even those alluded to within the life of the script. These moods of empathy are of largely one aspect, an emotional stress due to bewildering frightful times, ranging in expression from panic to rage to helpless broken sobs. The empathy beyond the events of the play, that is so absorbingly tangible is one of tremendous human understanding. It is wrapped and fathomed from the people in the cast, from people in general and directed in particular to the understanding of those Puritans in the time of Salem, 1692. There is a rapport between the actors that permeates their playing, that calls up understanding in the audience and bespeaks a director.

meates their playing, that calls up understanding in the audience, and bespeaks a director who know his business and seems to call it 'Human Be-ing'.

'Human Be-ing'.

The experience of 'The Crucible' is not a humorous one. Whoever infers that the intention of the play is strictly a 'sature' on past political atmospheres takes Miller's play far amiss of its mettle. Whoever goes to see it with a 'pleasant' evening in mind, makes a mistake, 'The Crucible' makes people very uncomfortable; it is inescapable.

The analysis and empathy on the part of cast and director with the historical people they portray leads to a total sense of absolute conviction that makes for nervous titters rather than guffaws. The keenest aspect of under-standing that comes through is the conviction with which these Puritans lived their lives in with which these Puritans lived their lives in their self-appointed, self-ordained theocracy. For an audience composed largely of students still formulating principles to live by, being confronted with the struggle of people actively committed to attaining their 'Principles' calls for an empathy of experience that may be overlooked or may just be lacking. But in John Proctor (Peter Beiger) and Mary Warren (Laurie Thompson) and Reverend Høle (Frank Wilson) can be found the struggle to decide and the conflict with doubt that all people know. It is on

To read 'The Crucible' by Arthur Miller is to get caught up in a melodrama that is excit-what is most seriously lacking in much of the education of Penn State students. It is not difficult to memorize facts. But facts are so often meaningless unless they can be related to a purpose.

So when Colloquy organizers sat down to decide what the most effective way to promote their program of academic reform this fall would be. they chose the "Human Dimension of Higher Education."

They decided that this human element to education, the kind that characterized the Greek teachers and their students and the kind which has slowly been lost in most universities as they so rapidly expanded, has been lessened in

They worked to bring resource persons from across the nation to the University to meet with students, to talk with them, to learn something new. And it was done with a personal touch. A mingling of minds, a dissection of philosophies: this is what Colloquy is.

That any professor can try as much possible to keep the dialogue in his class an open, personal channel is fine. But one man cannot effectively communicate with 70 others.

If Colloquy, limited financially as it is, can bring a personal touch to our educations once a term, it is a start. And with increasing numbers of students getting involved in the experience each term, perhaps the human dimension of education could come to Penn State.

Colloquy is broke, though. Its debts amount to nearly $3,000, and it can go no further until it gets some money.

Their office is on the second floor of the HUB. They're accepting donations.

It is ironic that Amchitka, in addition to being at the tail end of nowhere, has been "preserved" for the past half century as a federal wild life refuge. No money-making opportunities for developers there. The possibility that nuclear testing in the Alcutians might trigger earthquakes and send real estate tumbling into the ocean around the Pacific rim did not concern Mr. Hughes because Las Vegas is safely inland. Besides, if the Pacific rim had slid into the ocean, Mr. Hughes' property could become "waterfront" and even more valuable.

When Mr. Hughes complains that nuclear testing could be bad for the real estate business he touches the heart of America. Ironically the real estate developer may turn out to the be the savior of the human race!!

Forsaken Opportunity

To THE EDITOR: It saddened me to hear the news of Penn State's impending return to the Orange Bowl to play seventh ranked Missouri. Assuming that the reason for playing a major-college schedule is to be ranked as highly as possible, I cannot see the logic behind the team's decision to possibly lose their prehing when they have nothing to gain by playing such their ranking when they have nothing to gain by playing such their ranking when they have nothing to gain by playing such a teain.

According to the Philadelphia Inquirer, one of the major reasons for the players' choice of Miami over Dallas was that the black players were hesitant to play in Dallas. Having been raised in Dallas, I feel insulted by that statement, and all I can say is: Ask Jerry Levias, Don Perkins, or Bob Hayes what it is like to play there.

Another reason that was given was that the players felt that a bowl game was a reward for a job well-done during the season. But shouldn't the many students and fans who put forth good money during the season to follow the Nittany Lions be entitled to see the best bowl game possible?

I think that there are other reasons which were not mentioned, though. Perhaps the vision of sun-drenched beaches and the opportunity to escape from the cold are a bit more appealing than the tough Texas Longhorns with their overpowering ground attack and gritty defense.

I feel it's a shame that the team, after working so hard all year to achieve national status, should forsake the opportunity to gain this status.

Unrealistic Policy

To THE EDITOR: The time has come for the Administration to review its completely unrealistic policy toward residence hall charges for Nittany dwellers. Payment for the construction and operation of residence halls and dining areas is made on a long term basis solely from room and board charges. For residents in the newer complexes such as East and South Halls, these charges are equitable—even reasonable, considering the benefits which are to be had in the modern complexes. However, the Nittany resident reaps very few of the benefits of the modern dorm areas. He must endure the cramped quarters of an area designed for temporary housing. He must walk several blocks merely to use the laundry facilities, or the dining hall, or the rec room. He can expect to know the business of everyone in his building, since paper-thin walls offer little soundproofing.

Yet the most inequitable aspect of Nittany living is not the clanging radiators, or the less than luxurious decor, but instead, the puny $20 refund which one receives for sacrificing the above mentioned benefits of the complex dorms.

the above mentioned benefits of the complex dorms.

Since the Nittany Halls have been paid for many times over, Nittany residents are in fact paying for the newer complexes—the complexes which they do not use. Therefore, I feel that the residence fee for Nittany should be reduced by at least $50 per term. The remaining cost will easily cover the maintenance and utilities of the halls including dining hall fees. This is the equitable approach. I trust the administration will realize it eventually.

Secure Liberation

TO THE EDITOR: Tuesday's Faculty Forum, in which Donn Bailey responded to an earlier column by Ernest C. Pollard, struck me as being nothing short of paranoid. Bailey chooses to attack Pollard for being "paternalistic, condescending," and (worst of all) "European."

while all of these characteristics may be true of Pollard, one should keep in mind that he has probably been as heavily oriented in those directions as Bailey has been with his black nationalism. Not every white man can be Norman Mailer, Mr.

Bailey.

Bailey should realize that in attacking Pollard and other moderates he is only impeding our battle against the real racists, meaning both the Southern rednecks and the practical racists of the North. Bailey's final paragraph is totally expectively.

Let's be pragmatic for once, Mr. Bailey, and realize that it is necessary to enlist the help of the Ernest C. Pollards in order to eliminate racism and secure the long-overdue black liberation.

If Mr. Cooper wants to have the last word in this controversy, he should make sure he gets the latest facts.

During August, Sen. Murphy held a series of press conferences and appeared on the Johnny Carson TV show accusing the United Farm Workers Organizing Committee and specifically Jerry Cohen UFWOC Council with lying to the American people and perpetuating a hoax. Sen. Murphy's charges were that the grapes tested were tampered with by the union and the Bianco Fruit, growers of the grapes in question, had not used aldrin for years.

It is reported in the October 1 issue of El Malcriado. The Voice of the Farm Worker, that in testimony before Sen. Mondale's subcommittee on Migratory Labor Mr. Cal Pond, an official of the Safeway Stores stated, "that Safeway had tested grapes in their warehouse to make sure no one could possibly have tampered with them, and the results of the test showed residues of aldrin at 18 and 19 parts per million, exactly as the tests conducted by the union had shown." Safeway reportedly dumped the grapes and cancelled their order with Bianco.

It was reported that after hearing this testimony, Senator Murphy denied making the charges. After Senator Mondale read statements Senator Murphy admitted, "I may have to apologize." It seems that Mr. Cooper should do the same.

Japan's NHK Symphony: 'Graceful'

Eastern Music in Rec Hall

By JOYCE DAVENHALL Collegian Music Critic

"Graceful" is the most appropriate description of Tuesday night's concert by The NHK Symphony from Tokyo, conducted by Hiroyuki Iwaki. The performance was romantic, dramatic, interesting and above all, satisfying. Despite the setting—Rec Hall—the sonoities of both the Japanese selections and the western renditions transmitted well.

and the western renditions transmitted well.

Toshiro Mayuzumi's BUGAKU reminded one a little of switched-on Moog: the solo violin beginning led to an ever increasing whine of strings. Iwaki deftiy controlled his players, bending and shaping each nearly imperceptible beat. In the midst of swarming, angry bees and a bird-like flutter of the flute, the essentially dramatic piece was balanced by resounding tympani crashes and other near-electronic effects from the orchestra.

Iwaki's eloquent left hand was the focal point for the audience—he obviously sensed the dramatic con-tent of the ballet suite and reacted to it with florid effects from the orchestra.

At times the ballet suite began to sound not a little bit corny; one felt it could have made a splendid sound track for a World War II movie. This "flaw" however is easily explained by the origin of the piece; commissioned by Americans for American audiences and western instrumentation, BUGAKU emerged as a well-nackaged shipy selection of traditional (and-or stereotyped) Janapese idiom combined with modern atonal effects

With a pared down orchestra supporting her in with a pared down orchestra supporting her in Chopin's First Concerto for Piano and Orchestra, Op. 11, Miss Hiroko Nakamura performed a splendidly controlled and competent three movements. The Tchaikovsky Fifth was c x h i l e r a t i n g. Although the first movement opening was a little unsure, once the orchestra and the conductor got into the meat of the first movement the symphony got off the ground. Iwaki repeatedly pulled precise portamento interpretations from his string section and aired a lovely French horn line that was sucked into the ceiling. The French horn solo in the opening bars of the second movement was well executed and the portamento interpretation was again a beautifully sentimental touch.

After an exhausting crescendo and consequent silence came a precision ending due entirely to Iwaki's insistance upon keeping the tempo up. The third and fourth movements were separated by just the hint of a pause—violin bows still in the air. The Valse was again superbly romantic and the Finale precise and accurate. Unfortunately, by the fourth movement the brass section seemed to be performing less well as a group; the first trumpets were not as accurate as one would have liked.

Following a standing ovation—seemingly a Penn State tradition—the NHK performed Yasukibushi, according to a member of the orchestra, "traditional Japanese folk music." With all the enthusiasm and much more authenticity than BUGAKU, this percussion-filled selection generated on-the-edge-of-the-seat reaction in the audience. With a real crowdpleaser behind them the NHK exited to well deserved applause.

Despite a slightly bass-heavy seating (which incidentally was a distinct advantage in color tones for the Tchaikovsky) and the loss of tone in pizzacato passages, the performers were unusually well rehearsed and responsive. Iwaki was certainly not bowing to save face.

live their allotted space and turn again into oblivion.

The stage is washed with harsh bright light. It drains the color from the faces of the Puritans, highlights the harshness of their existence and casts into stern relief their own wan hardness of "work-love God-strength". The acting realm itself (designed by Robert Barnes appears like a floating monstrosity, a bit of flotsam thrown up into the light for a while out of the cluttered folldstream of life. It is like looking at Salem through a microscope. The stage is a dish, slanted; it reflects the angle of the house and throws everything back into the audience, to cope with how they may.

With the assistance of Judi Brickel and Robert Brewer, director Richard Shank achieves the 'orchestration' of all these elements. It seems somehow that there's one person missing from the curtain call, this 'conductor'. He may be up in the back of the house somewhere taking notes, but when the cast takes its bow, the whole show suddenly takes on the completeness of intensity, his personality is there and Richard Shank is bowing with them. He is one of the best things that ever happened to University Theatre. 'The Crucible' burns on.

Israeli Diplomat at Hillel

By DEBBIE FRYE Collegian Staff Writer

"If there is a war, we will win it: if there is peace, it will be by accident; if the present stalemate continues, we will prevail." That is the way Moshe Yegar, Israel's consul general in Philadelphia, summarized his country's immediate future.

Speaking at the Hillel Foundation meeting Tuesday night, Yegar blamed much of the current situation in the Middle East on the Arab leadership. He said that since 1919, when these nations started to emerge from their colonial era, no real leaders have been produced—only "military adventurers."

Yegar said that these military leaders have refused to acknowledge the existence of any Israel state claiming that "we are compared to foreign invaders." But he said, "I am unaware of any other people who have maintained their homeland."

Yegar said that Jewish people have been denied their political freedom for over 2,000 years by groups who said it wasn't morally right for the Arabs to be turned out of their

"But what is a greater moral right than for people to go back to their nation?" Yegar questioned. He said the founders of the Zionist movement did not intend it to be exclusively for the Jews. He added that Zionism was also a the control of the decident 'humanistic ideology'' including both Arabs

The consul also said that the Arab leaders "cannot think in terms of peace," and if they were not fighting Israel, they would be fighting each other. To back up his statement, Yegar mentioned the current trouble in Yemen and the terrorist problem in Lebanon.

He termed the situation in Lebanon an "outright Egyptian-Syrian invasion of Lebanon." Yegar stated, "Nobody can move thousands of people through a country (Syria) without at least the passive consent of the Speaking later on the guerrilla raids of Israel by Palestinian commandos, Yegar said the objectives of most of these raids have been nonmilitary targets such as children's play areas and markets. Yegar cited there has been not one case of execution of the terrorists by the Israeli government. He said the Arabs are being held in government prisons and reprisals are taken against those who help them.

negotiations. Yegar said the first stage of their plan is for Israel to withdraw to the pre-war borders. He said the next stage and the unspoken one is the "solution to the Palestinian" problem which is reality is an eradication of Israel."

Questioned as to the Arab objective in peace

Yegar said there will be no change in the current situation unless there are direct negotiations between Israel and her neighbors—Lebanon to the north, Syria to the northeast, Jordan directly to the east and Egypt to the south. "This time we have to establish normal relations."

Yegar blamed much of the difficulty in negotiations on the Arabs, who, he said, will not try to compromise. However, he stated, "We are not going to pack up and leave—if there is a last stand for the Israeli people, then Israel is the place. There are no alternatives to go to."

It is a distinctive uniform for women in the Air Force college program to qualify them for non-flying Air Force jobs.

The uniforms were the center of attention Wednesday in the office of Dr. John T. Benner, an Ohio State University vice president, where two young women were the first coeds in the nation to get them.

They will be available soon in the other three Air Force ROTC programs for women, at Auburn and Drake universities and East Carolina State at Greenville. N.C.

Callie Cramer, 20, of Columbus, and Susan Orkins, 21, of Tioga, Pa., are the only Ohio State coeds to qualify for the program—and the uniforms—so far, although others have applied.

Nylon, Reverse osmosis,

A fiber that started making girls' legs more beautiful some 30 years ago.

And a process that's been around a lot longer. But when Du Pont scientists and engineers look at them in a new way, they combine into an idea that can change the world.

Reverse osmosis is a purification process that requires no phase change. It's potentially the cheapest way to desalinate water.

Du Pont's innovation? Hollow, semipermeable ny Ion fibers much finer than human hair. Symmetrical, with an outer diameter of .002 inch and a wall thickness of .0005 inch, with an accuracy of manufacture maintained at close to 100%. Twenty-five to 30 million of them encased in a precisely engineered unit 14 inches in diameter by 7 feet long.

The result: a semipermeable surface area of about 85,000 square feet—the size of a 2-acre lot—and up to 10,000 gallons of desalted water per day.

So far "Permasep" permeators have been used experimentally to purify brackish and polluted water, and in various industrial separations. But the potential to desalt seawater, too, is there.

So Du Pont scientists and engineers are even now working toward improved fibers, units and plant designs that should make it possible to get fresh water from salt at a price that any town or nation

Welsh-Born Theatre Arts Instructor Makes Five O'Clock Theatre Debut

By MARIANNE MOUGHEMER Collegian Staff Writer

David Miles, a new instructor in theatre arts, made his Five O'Clock Theatre debut last night with the short play "Neither." The play, which centers on the conflicts which plague all levels of society, upholds Miles' premise that, "drama is everywhere."

Welsh-born Miles has not been everywhere, but his interests in drama and educational television have taken have tach far flung countries as England, Nigery, and interests in drama and educational television have taken him to such far-flung countries as England, Nigeria and the United States.

He studied at the University of London and later traveled to Nigeria where he was a teacher. Because of his radio work for British foreign intelligence during World War II, he was asked to help pioneer the Radio Education Program in Nigeria. He produced and later headed a broadcasting unit, but was soon drawn into a pressing problem in northern Nigeria.

Acute Teacher Shortage

The teacher shortage had become acute: the only solution in Nigeria was to introduce instructional television. Miles worked in Nigeria for eight years before coming to the United States.

Miles called television a "new sense" but said it is not a substitute for the classroom teacher; rather it is "only a means by which a teacher can bring an experience to students that he cannot bring himself"

He charged that educators too often define the results they want to achieve without investigating the means best suited to achieve them. He said that television should be used more, but the tube alone should not be the basis of a course.

Problem of Instructional TV

"The problem is that you see a situation which has serious deficiencies, and see a situation (instructional television), which is going to alleviate this at least temporarily. Then you become proud of it and it becomes permanent," he explained, citing this as the greatest danger of instructional television.

David Miles said he felt the advantage of an American education is that U.S. educators aren't afraid to create new subjects. In Britain, for example, there is only one school where film making can be studied, while in the United States there are scores of them. Miles sees this as a result of the megaversity system, but deplores the loss in student-faculty relationships.

He advocated reformation of the counseling system

He advocated reformation of the counseling system so that the same adviser who approves the student's No. 2 card, would be supplemented by a permanent counselor, whose major interest would be in the student as a person, and not just as an academic entity.

Miles studied at the Royal Academy of Dramatic Art in London and has done considerable repertory work in

'Journalist First, Personality Second'

Cronkite Succeeds as TV Journalist sponsibility in television news," Wiles wrote. Cronkite emphasizes the need for objective reporting, "as nearly as it can be attained, and has refrained almost entirely from expressing his opinions on his broadcasts. He seldom uses the word 'interpretation' and instead speaks of putting the news 'in context' or of making it 'understandable' to people," according to Wiles. This emphasis on objectivity is related to the importance Cronkite attributes to believability and the "responsibilities that he, as a believable newscaster, has to his audience." "Indications are that Cronkite's own believability is

Walter Cronkite's success as a television news man rests more on his journalistic background than on broadcasting experience,

His Mcdium and Profession."

The installation of Cronkite as managing editor of "The CBS Evening News" in 1962 marked, in a way, the end of an era at CBS, according to Wiles.

"As the 'front man' for the daily news program, Cronkite differed significantly in training, experience and inclination from those who had preceded him in that position." he said.

"He was a journalist with a background of newspaper reporting and more than 11 years' experience at United reporting and more than 11 years experience at United Press, whereas most of his predecessors had been network radio announcers—news readers—who simply migrated to television when that medium began to emerge." Wiles explained.

"As the top CBS newsman, Cronkite has insisted that he be given the title of managing editor, and has further required that it become a real and working description of his duties and responsibilities. Therefore, . . . Cronkite has been able to assume control of 'The CBS Evening News' operation and to function in much the same way as would the managing editor of a newspaper,' he said.

Wiles noted that this practice, apparently not common in the broadcast industry, is a major factor affecting Cronkite's ability to influence the presentation of news to millions of people.

Furthermore, it is no accident that Cronkite applies the terminology of the print media to his position on the "Evening News," believing, as he does, that every television

The statement reads in full:
"We of the State College Grape Boycott Committee have learned that a deal might or already has been made with the Administration either by USG or concerned individuals. #### That Other Reid Talent

Collegian Sports Editor

Listening to Mike Reid talk about music is vaguely like watching the Apollo astronauts ca-vort on the moon. It's dynamic, fascinating and beautiful—but it still seems oddly inappropriate.

Musicians are generally wispy intellectuals with unkept hair. Reid is a monstrous tackle who shaves his head, and no amount of tape or padding can conceal the muscle that he applies to those opponents unlucky enough to play opposite him each Saturday.

Reid looks imposing just lying peacefully on the training table and it seems that he'd bounce up and be ready to make a tackle at a second's notice. The senior All-American may be the closest thing Penn State will ever have to Gene "Big Daddy" Lipscomb, a long-time pro defensive tackle who "just gathered me up an armful of players - then picked out the one who had the ball.

Now that Reid (thanks to CBS News) is the most famous athlete-musician since Denny Mc-Lain, a lot of people come to ask him why. How can two such widely separate and demanding disciplines be carried on so well by the same man?

"Most people see me and feel, 'well, I'm not going to buy that'" Reid said, "but I don't owe anyone an explanation. Music happens to be my thing."

Mike Reid's music is not the type that generally occupies the minds of college students. No creatily occupies the minds of college students. No Creedence Clearwater or Led Zeppelin, but Beethoven. Liszf and Tschaikovsky are Reid's "thing." He's a piano playing music major and he's a very good one. He'll audition for Maurice Abravanel conductor of the Utah Symphony Orthodoxida in Martin.

chestra, in May.

"I don't think that students give legitimate music enough of a chance," Reid said. "There's nothing that dictates that you have to know the hidden meaning in a piece. Too many people reject it before they've heard it.

"When I first heard Tschaikovsky, I didn't even know who he was. But I liked it and wanted to hear more of it."

But Reid does much more than just listen chestra, in May.

But Reid does much more than just listen and play. He's worked at composing and wants to go ahead with it in the future. "That's where studying music here has helped me," he said. "I do an awful lot of composition from the light standpoint. I do a lot of improvisation on the piano now. Five years ago I couldn't have done

Since he's a shoo-in for All-Everything honors and an outside possibility for the Heisman Trophy. thoughts of a football career are naturally close to Reid every day. But don't rule out composition as the field in which he'll achieve fame.

"You can have all the technical skills in the world and still not make it," Reid said. "You have to be willing to lose all chains.

"If I find I can do that, then I'll follow it to the Nth degree. If I can make it there, then that would be it.

Pro football? "Even though music will eventually hold my total future. I want to play pro football," he said.

Reid can capture the headlines in so many ways it's surprising that he hasn't done it before by scoring. Last week against Maryland, he inter-cepted a pass and scored his first collegiate touchdown-in his last home game. As usual, this most articulate football player had a comment.

"I tend to be very sentimental," Reid noted. "I think there's something very emotional about a big, fat lineman scoring his first touchdown in his last home

Yes, Pitt is one of the best Eastern football teams this year and Carl DePasqua's team will try to prove it by dumping the Orange-bowl bound Lions right on their undefeated heads.

The Panthers claim strength by pointing to the fact that they have already beaten three of the five big teams which usually dominate Eastern football. Army, Navy and Syracuse will all testify to the fact that DePasqua has rejuvenated Pitt football.

All the Panthers need to make themselves the champs of the Eastern seaboard (Dartmouth aside) is a victory over traditional rival Penn State. Most Lion fans would discount a Pitt win as just another fantasy, but State coach Joe Paterno disagrees.

Lion assistant J. T. White, who scouted the Panthers' last few games, believes that they do have the guns to put on quite a show tomorrow.

"I am very impressed with Pitt," White said. "They're much improved and have more life. They prefer a balanced attack but have had to throw more than they like because they had to play catch-up against West Virginia and Notre Dame."

Improved Defense

The only word for the Panther defense this year is "improved", and the major credit for improvement must be given to middle linebacker Ralph Cindrich. If Cindrich hadn't been on the field against Notre Dame, the Irish probably would have scored twice as many points.

As it was, Notre Dame won 49-7, but Cindrich was everywhere, making 11 tackles and getting nine assists. The sophomore linebacker is a Mike Reid in Panther's clothing, according to White.

"He calls the defensive signals and is an excellent leader and performer," White said, "No one has been able to go up the middle against them consistently."

Another reason that no one has been able to go up the middle against the Panthers is defensive tackle Lloyd Weston. The 6-1, 234-pound monster is finally beginning to show signs of the greatness predicted for him before he decided to go to Pitt.

Penn State lands in the big crater tomorrow, and the moon men from Pitt will try to catch the Lions looking towards the big Orange crater down Miami way. There's that slim chance to prove they're the best in the East in the process.

'The Russians Aren't Coming

By WARREN PATTON Collegian Sports Writer

To liven up a gymnastics class a year ago, the instructor divided the class into two sections. The least clumsy gymnasts were placed on the American squad while the stumble-bums filled the Polish ranks. Special meaning was given to this charade since the United States ironically was in the midst of another poor performance in the Olympics. The U.S. squad, lacking organization but not lacking dissension, came in a poor seventh-two places behind Poland.

Sick of the listless American performances in international competition, the United States Gymnastic Federation has named Penn State coach Gene Wettstone to head a newly created National Gymnastics team with one purpose in mind improve U.S. showings abroad.

The United States has realized that unless develops any concentrated program, it will be difficult to expect great results in international competition," Wettstone said. "The United States Gymnastic Federation has taken the initiative to produce a coalition group that has formed a tentative plan of six years in which we hope to culminate in the 1976 Olympics."

That goal - second place in the Olympics is part of a long program that includes more international meets and a more concentrated effort at home to unify American styles in competition. The stress now will be made on rigid compulsory exercises which are used in international competition instead of varying individual efforts. Also, now there will be a "share the wealth" attitude regarding collegiate competition.

"Prior to this, coaches were shooting for their own college against someone else's. Information was hidden and nobody learned anything from it." Wetistone said. "Now, the coach will get help from six or seven assistants from all over the country who will get the information and help select the members of the squad."

To start off, Wettstone has kept in step with the National theme of "Get the Commies". And he has. Only, not quite with sub-machine guns and fire-bombs but with a few letters of correspondence and a good pair of scissors to cut through the red tape. An Eastern European bloc nation. the Bulgarian National Team, will make a tour next year in the United States in both a gymnastic and good will effort.

"Bulgaria has been most friendly to us when we've competed against them in the past," Wettstone said. "They have a fine philosophy of sports, in which they believe politics should play no part. Our men mix well with theirs and should help in foreign relations.

"They are also bringing their women's gymnastic team along with them when they compete against us, in what will be the first exhibition of Moderne Gymnastics by the World Champion Bulgarians in this country. The girls do tricks with hoops and balls to music and it is quite beautiful

Just getting the Bulgarians to come here Winter Term wasn't to be all that beautiful, as communications were buried under mounds of diplomatic red tape.

Assistant coach Ed Isabelle said "Just to get a letter to them, we have to send it to their embassy in Washington, they send it back home to their government and then their team gets it. Then their reply goes to their government, to their embassy here and then back to us. We tried to get the Russians to come here but they declined. We wrote them in the beginning of the summer and didn't receive a reply till fall. Anything that goes in or out has to be censored, of course, and that really tangles things up."

With the new national team and the lengthening of the gymnastic season, plus the coming of the Bulgarians, a new era in American gymnastics appears on the horizon. As Wettstone put it, "A new era is emerging from the fact that the AAU is no longer in control and that we have one main purpose in the development of gymnastics.'

To get a good pair of red tape cutting scissors.

Lions vs. Panthers in Finale

Booters To Meet Pitt

By BOB DIXON Collegian Sports Writer

The Penn State soccer team has a record of 2-6, has not played a game for two weeks, never came near qualifying for the already-started NCAA playoffs, and has nothing left to shoot for this season...except maybe a win over Pittsburgh tomorrow in the booters' final action of the year.

But all the odds are against the

But an the seas.

Lions.

With the aforementioned problems, the most difficult task for State coach Herb Schmidt is, as he put it. "to help the team retain the proper attitude."

Schmidt went on to explain what he

"There's a definite morale problem," the coach said. "This is the last game of the season and after that there's nothing. The team has been off for two weeks and it's going to be hard for them to be up for this one."

It's going to be hard for them to be up to, this one."

If all that wasn't enough, the two week layoff that the Lions have had since their last game, a 4-2 loss to Temple, seems to have done more harm than good. For one thing, the consistently bad weather has hampered the booters' attempts at practicing. But worse than that, the Lions have lost some key players during the layoff due to various accidents.

Last weekend junior Russ Phillips, a Last weekend junior Russ Phillips, a starting fullback, sustained a back injury in an automobile accident and is now in the hospital Also, junior goalie Leth Muce is now carrying several stitches in his head after colliding with another player in Monday's practice and might not be able to play against Pitt.

But problems or no problems, the Pitt game—which is at home at 2 p.m.—still lies ahead and Schmidt is busy preparing, as the rain permits, for the Panthers.

State and Pitt tied last year, 1-1, and

State and Pitt tied last year, 1-1, and State and Pitt tied last year. 1-1, and the Panthers won't be easy prey this time either, sporting a 5-4-1 record on the season. The two teams have had four common opponents and each team has won just once. The Lions defeated West Virginia while Pitt downed Temple, and both teams lost to West Chester and Bucknell.

Bucknell.

No Difference
These results show little difference between the two teams, but after the common opponents. Pitt's schedule shows up much weaker than State's. While the Panthers fiddle around with such "powerhouses" as Slippery Rock, Grove City and Carnegie-Mellon, the Lions are kept busy by the likes of Army, Navy and defending national champion Maryland. There seems to be a sound reason why Pitt is 5-4-1 and State is only 2-6.

"Pitt's schedule is weater than ours, but I'm not about to take them lightly." Schmidt said. "I've seen them twice and for the most part they are a quick, aggressive team. They like to run and they like contact. They are balanced offensively and defensively and easily switch their style of play."

fensively and defensively and easily switch their style of play."

The Panthers are basically an experienced team with a nucleus of seniors at the halfaack and fullback positions. There are several exceptional freshmen starting at key positions however, including center forward John White and goalie Alan Hackney.

Long....Unrewarding

The Lion booters aren't up against an easy task tomorrow. The season has been long and unrewarding...this last game can hardly seen worth the trouble But Schmidt is hoping for one last spurt out of his team.

"This is the end of the line and we have one major goal." the coach said "We haven't been able to do it all year but against Pitt we're hoping to put it all together in a complete team effort."

That is what the Lions will be shooting for tomorrow against Pitt. That's all there is left.

McCovey Wins MVP Award; Beats Out Mets' Tom Seaver

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — "As strange as it may seem," said the National League's Most Valuable Player, "I think I was capable of having a better year."

Will'e McCovey sat on a trunk in the Candlestick Park dressing room yesterday, happily discussing his narrow victory over the New York Met. Tom Seaver in the MVP election by the Baseball Writers Association.

McCovey, who set career marks for himself with a batting average of 320, 45 homers and 126 runs batted in, almost single-handedly kept the cruppled San Francisco Giants in the NL's Western Division pennant race until the final week.

"If they had pitched to me a little more," the 6-loot-4, 210-pound first baseman said matter of factly, "I would have hit a few more homers.

"And if I had been a little healthier, I would have played in a few more games and done better. I think I'm capable of having as good a year next year or better." the big first baseman added, "All I hope for now is to stay healthy to play in enough games to do it."

McCovey wound up with 265 votes to 243 for Seaver in balloting by two writers from each city that was taken after the regular season, but before the divisional play-offs and World Series.

Both McCovey and Seaver received 11 first-place votes, but McCovey was the only player listed on all 24 ballots—nobody placed him lower than tourth—while Seaver was not named by two of the voters.

Third in the voting was Atlanta outfielder Hank Aaron with two first-place votes and 188 points, while Pete Rose of Cincinnati was fourth with 127 votes and Ron Santo of Chicago was fifth with 121.

A total of 38 players were listed in the voting with Bob Gibson, the St. Louis pitcher who was MVP last year getting two votes.

two votes.

McCovey's physical condition was symbolic of the Giants' troubles all year as Manager Clyde King had to shuffle players in and out of his lineup all season.

McCovey himself was troubled all season-long by a chronic hip alment and also had injuries to his toes and knee.

Another Myth Exploded

Assistant Sports Editor
Some irate fan has exploded one of the most popular myths on the Penn State campus. No. the obelisk didn't fall when one of the downtown waitresses walked by. No, someone didn't manage to walk the length of Hammond building without going outside.

The Burkhart myth-the myth of the perfect record of an average quarterback-was shattered by someone from the Moon. Moon Township, that is. It seems that some football fan in that township near Greater Pittsburgh airport has dug deep into his history book and found a game where Penn State's Chuck Burkhart came off the field on the short end of the score.

When Burkhart was playing his first year of junior high football as a ninth grader for Montour High School, the junior high team from Moon got out their ray guns and blasted Mon-

DONOVAN tour. It's the only game Burkhart's ever lost. The loss wouldn't mean as much as the paper it was printed on-except for one fact. The opposing quarterback that day was a guy by the name of Jim Friedl, and tomorrow Friedl will be throwing the ball for Pittsburgh, trying to beat Burkhart again.

Friedl also owns another blot on Burkhart's record. Their senior years, the two quarterbacks faced each other, each commanding undefeated teams, in the last game of the season. The winner of the game would get a berth in the WPIAL Class A championship game. Both teams lost the chance to win a crown as they played to a frustrating, 14-14, tie.

Burkhart is not turning instantaneously grey-haired over the phenomenon of facing his only conqueror. In fact, he doesn't remember too much about the game.

"I was a halfback back then and I just came from a Catholic school where we didn't play any football," Burkhart vaguely remembers, "I don't really remember too much about it."

Apparently the Friedl-led Moonmen really zapped Montour, but even Friedl doesn't put much stock in the victory. "It doesn't mean too much," the Panther quarterback said, "but we beat them real bad."

Both vividly remember the tie their senior years, when the two teams met in the rain. "We were winning that game until the last 1:30," Friedl said. "Then Burkhari threw a touchdown pass to Dave Havern."

If the name Havern sounds familiar, it is because Havern was the quarterback who set myriads of passing records for Pitt last year. He was struck with mononucleosis in spring training, however, and was medically red-shirted this year, setting the stage for Friedl's debut.

At first it looked as though the last time Burkhart and Friedl would meet would be that frustrating tie, as Friedl enrolled at The Citadel. He became a starter for them his sophomore year, but then transferred to Pitt. According to NCAA rules he had to sit out last year, but this season he is the No. 1 passer for Pitt.

The natural question after reading about all these quarterbacks is how do so many happen to come from the banks of the Ohio River? Everyone knows that Western Pennsylvania abounds in quarterbacks -- Joe Namath, Terry Hanratty - but Burkhart, Havern and a quarterback on the State freshman team by the name of John Hufnagle all played for Montour High School and Jim Friedl played for the high school down the

"A lot has to do with coach Bob Phillips, (former Montour coach now on the Penn State staff)" Burkhart said. "He would pick out the quarterbacks and have them work out."

Phillips, who started both Burkhart and Havern on their way, admits that the coach picks out the quarterbacks, but they make themselves good. "They work at it a lot," Phillips said. "We try to pick boys that are conscientious and will do the work on their own. Generally, they practice the year round."

Phillips discounts passing ability as the main criteria for rating a young quarterback. "He must have good leadership qualities." Phillips said. "He must be good citizen, be very conscientious and he must have an all-around good character. A quarterback should be an all-around athlete who can run."

All these points must have been in Phillips' mind when he converted a junior high halfback by the name of Chuck Burkhart into a quarterback. Millions of people across the country know Burkhart as the quarterback who can't pass.

Whether this second Burkhart myth is true or not, the Lion quarterback is not setting any passing records. He holds a rare distinction of running for more touchdowns than he has thrown. He has scored twice on the ground and has yet to throw a TD pass-but he doesn't

"In senior high we thought that Burkhart had all the qualities to be a quarterback," Phillips said. "He is a good leader and a good athlete."

Which is exactly what Joe Paterno has been saying about Burkhart all along, and exactly why Burkhart myths have arisen.

Phipps is the premier pro football prospect also viciously aggressive," said Thomas "and among current college seniors, and next best is a set of beefy tackles from Penn State and pound build." Notre Dame.

That's the opinion of talent scout Joe Thomas of the Miami Dolphins, whose eye for grid ability helped form the current National Football League powerhouse at Minnesota.

"He's 6-feet-3, strong, a great arm, a natural pro." said Thomas of Phipps.

Thomas, who left the Vikings for the American League after starting a flow of talent that led to the current title-contending crop, listed his top lour:

3. Mike Reid, defensive tackle. Penn State.
4. Steve Owens, running back, Oklahoma.

Reid has mobility to go along with his 6-3, 248-

The 1969 seniors leave Thomas a bit cold compared to other years, especially concerning wide receivers and offensive linemen.

"You always have trouble finding offensive linemen," the scout said. "But you usually have receivers coming out of your ears. But not this year."

Thomas pointed out that some of the finest quarterbacks are juniors, not ready for pro plucking. They include Mississippi's Archie Manning, Ohio State's Rex Kern, SMU's Chuck Stanford's Jim Plunkett and Texas

One of the best among the passing semiors is Terry Bradshaw, a 6-foot-3 quarterback from little Louisiana Tech, Thomas said.

Capitol Campus Plans Construction Program

Two new undergraduate programs in Building Construction and Transportation leading to a Bachelor of Technology Degree will be offered at the University's Capitol Campus.

In announcing plans for the programs, Richard H. Heindle, dean of the Capitol Campus faculty, said they have been established as new majors in the present Engineering Technology program.

Citing the need for a baccalaurcate program in building construction. J. H. Moore, in charge of engineering and technology, said graduates would find employment with contractors in the building construction field and with engineering and architectural/engineering firms who are engaged in the design and supervision of construction of buildings.

"These graduates," he said, "would serve as designers of elements of the building, inspectors of construction, and possibly as supervisors with building contractors."

Moore said the new major in transportation is designed to prepare students for careers in design and heavy construction of such projects as highway work, airfield construction, and construction of mass transportation facilities.

Graduates of the transportation major, he added, would find employment opportunities with highway departments, with consulting engineering firms, and with large contractors.

John D. Antrim, professor of engineering, will be coordinator of both of these new programs.

The two programs bring the number of majors offered in the bachelor of engineering technology program to five. The others are electrical design engineering technology, mechanical design engineering technology, and water resources engineering technology.

As all other Capitol Campus baccalaureate degree programs, the engineering technology program begins at the junior year level and is designed for students who have completed two years of college elsewhere.

Students who have completed 60 credits in a pre-engineering program at a four-year college or have graduated from an engineering transfer program at a junior college or community college are eligible to apply for the program. Applications also are being accepted from qualified associate degree graduates in engineering technology at both community colleges and the University's Commonwealth Campuses.
